TWO ARE KILLED IN EXTORTIONIST TRAP

Innocent Man Slain in Home Near Scene Of Shooting

$3,500 Payment Lures Culprit Into Hands of Police.

Owner of Phoenix Store Plot Victim

Son of Clerk Threatens Merchant in Series of Letters.

Phoenix, Ariz., June 3 (AP).—Two men were slain today by Department of Justice agents and Phoenix police after the officers had sprung a trap set for an extortionist who demanded $3,500 from S. Diamond, wealthy department store owner.

The suspected extortionist, identified as Louis Walsh, about 30, son of a woman clerk in the store, was shot down as he attempted to flee after he was alleged to have taken the money from Diamond at a downtown street corner.

Robert Perkins, 29, later was found mortally wounded on the porch of his home near the intersection where the shooting took place. He was an innocent victim of the shotgun and pistol fire.

Termed Accident.

Although agents here and Phoenix police declined to give an explanation of the shooting of Perkins, B. E. Sackett, acting agent in charge of the Department of Justice at Los Angeles, declared it was purely an accident. A bullet passed through the young man's head.

Perkins' mother and father said they went out into the street when they heard the shooting. Then they heard groans from the son's sleeping porch. He was undressed, in bed, unconscious and covered with blood when they found him.

Sackett said he had been informed by Chief Agent Joseph E. P. Dunn that Walsh had demanded money from Diamond on threat of bodily harm to himself and members of his family.

Slain in Chase.

The first extortion letter was delivered to Diamond last Monday. Federal agents had been working on the case since then and set their trap early today. Diamond had been notified in a letter he received yesterday to withdraw $3,500 in small bills from a bank and meet the writer at a designated street corner.

At midnight, Diamond kept the appointment. He said he handed the money to the man, who said, "I won't bother you any more."

Police and Justice Department agents closed in on the man after the payment was made. He started to run. Several shots were fired over his head and he threw the money to one side.

As he continued to run, the officers opened fire with shotguns and pistols.

N. C. Seat Won By Bulwinkle

Pou's Son Runs Second to Cooley; Race Close in Third District.

Charlotte, N. C., June 3 (AP).—Representative A. L. Bulwinkle, head prober of the Wirt charges of Communistic tendencies among "brain trust" personnel, was renominated for the Tenth North Carolina District seat in Congress on the face of nearly complete returns tabulated today from yesterday's Democratic primary.

Bulwinkle, Gastonia attorney, had 27,566 votes, against 24,668 for Hamilton C. Jones, Charlotte lawyer, in unofficial reports from 233 precincts of the 254 in the district.

In the Fourth District George Ross Pou, of Raleigh, ran second to Harold Cooley, Nashville attorney, in the five-cornered race for the House membership left vacant by the death, April 1, of the former's father, the veteran Representative E. W. Pou.

In the Third District the incumbent, Charles L. Abernethy, ran second to Graham Barden, of New Bern, who led with 5,903 votes in returns from 106 of 165 precincts. Abernethy had 4,283 and A. McL. Graham, of Clinton, was a close third, with 4,152.

In other Districts where incumbents had opposition they appeared to have safe majorities. They were John H. Kerr, in the Second; Frank W. Hancock, jr., in the Fifth; William B. Umstead, in the Sixth; J. Bayard Clark, in the Seventh, and Zebulon Weaver, in the Eleventh.

The turning point in the Nats' defeat by the Red Sox yesterday is pictured above. Buddy Myer drops Joe Cronin's throw in the third inning with a double play in sight as Bill Werber slides safely into the bag. Umpire Dineen is seen waving Werber out before reversing his decision. After Myer's error, the Red Sox went on to score two more runs.

Ax Murderer Hacks Woman, Son in Mansion

Another Son of St. Louis Corporation Official Is Hunted.

Los Angeles, June 3 (AP).—Brutally beaten with a hatchet, the bodies of Mrs. Carrie Payne, 38, and her 14-year-old son, Robert Payne, were found today in their Westwood Hills mansion.

Police launched a hunt for Louis Rude Payne, 20, another son of Mrs. Payne. The father, Lucius F. Payne, is a St. Louis corporation executive. Police reported the son had been seen in the vicinity since Wednesday, when the lights in the house were first noticed burning all night.

The bodies of the mother and son, the latter trussed, were discovered by Dr. T. Fisher, a neighbor, who investigated because of the burning lights. Police reported Robert evidently had fought his attacker, as the walls were splattered with blood.

The two victims seemingly had been dead several days. A blood-stained hatchet was found beneath a bed.

"I can't understand it," Dr. Fisher said. "The family apparently had no enemies and the two boys appeared to be very devoted to their mother."

Dr. Fisher said he had treated Louis Payne for injuries suffered

New Polish Default On Debt Is Expected

Warsaw, June 3 (AP).—A government spokesman indicated today that Poland will not make the war debt payment due the United States June 16, holding that the reasons which prevented payment on December 16, 1932, still prevail.

It was pointed out that the United States has not yet replied to a proposal for arbitration.

Checked by Ostermueller, Washington Drops Into 5th Place.

By Shirley L. Povich (Sports Editor of The Post).

Washington's first division rating was lost in the shuffle of American League developments yesterday with 10,000 of the citizenry at Griffith Stadium watching the Nats roll over and play dead before the pitching of one Fred Ostermueller, a party whose previous big league pitching record had been about as impressive as a Lilliputian in Gulliver's home town.

Young Ostermueller, a lean, lank and lath-like left-hander whom the expensive Boston Red Sox acquired from Rochester last winter, carried a record of one victory and five defeats into the ball game against Earl Whitehill, fresh from his one-hit triumph over the New York Yankees. The final score of 7 to 2 in favor of Boston eloquently bespeaks the almost undiluted success of the rookie Boston southpaw.

Thus the Red Sox mopped up with their third victory of the series here and succeeded in evicting the Nats from their tenancy of the first division which underwent a series of changes yesterday when the scores filtered in from other sectors.

While the Nats dropped to fifth,

Hundreds Feared Dead When Storm Hits Korea

Antarctic Heat Wave, 25 Above, Baffles Byrd's Weather Man

Little America, Antarctica, June 2 (Delayed) (AP). (Via MacKay Radio).—A "warm spell" in Antarctica, remarkable for its duration and possibly associated with unusual temperatures in northern latitudes, is puzzling the weather man of the second Byrd Antarctic expedition.

The "wave" has reached its twelfth day, and Meteorologist Haines, after the fashion of his profession, is cautiously unable to promise "relief" from temperatures which have risen to 25 degrees above zero.

It is the dead of winter night in these South Polar regions, and while paralyzing temperatures of 50 and 60 below zero are normally expected, the minimum reached on May 22 of 28 below has not been lowered since.

At the 8 a. m. observation today it was two below and apparently rising.

Vast streams of warm air pouring through the upper atmosphere from the oceans to the north account for the unusual mildness, Haines said. They range up to an altitude of 15,000 feet and more. By means of balloons Haines runs daily soundings. The baloons are inflated with hydrogen. Swinging belw them is a lighted taper enabling the meteorologist to follow them on dark days.

Rifle Fire Roils Havana as New Crisis Impends

Terrorism Breaks After Mendieta Aid Quits, Hitting 'Dictator.'

Havana, June 3 (AP).—Thousands of machine gun and rifle shots kept the fashionable Vedado section of Havana in a state of nervous tension today as the National government seemed to be moving toward another crisis.

Terrorists were firing into the air, apparently to cause excitement and to call attention to a growing breach between civil and military authorities. None was injured.

The new challenge to President Carlos Mendieta was precipitated by the resignation of his secretary, Emeterio Santo Venia, a member of the cabinet. He withdrew because there are unmistakable signs of an approach of a military dictatorship, he said today.

"If the country wants to live under the heel of the military boot it is all right with me, but the moment has arrived when the government must define itself," he said. "It must be either one thing or another—either military or civil."

The new division in Cuba's troubled affairs was brought about by the insistence of Col. Fulgencio Batista, head of the army, that the government take stringent measures to suppress terrorism.

He protested against freeing a man arrested in connection with discovery of a 50-pound bomb. It was understood that persons influential in the government urged release of the man. Col. Batista, it was understood, sent a note to the presidential palace urging the man be held.

It was learned from an authoritative source that Col. Batista is willing to make concessions for the sake of tranquillity, but that he remains opposed to liberation of persons accused of terrorism merely because they are members of influential organizations.

President Mendieta refused to comment.

Lumber Yard Blaze Perils Ontario City

Gogoma, Ont., June 3 (AP).—Fire, which destroyed a square mile of piled lumb in yards of the Poupore Lumber Co., for several hours today menaced this city.

When the blaze started this community of 2,000 found itself almost without fighting equipment. Most of the apparatus had been sent to fight a forest fire in the Onaping Lake district. Several houses were destroyed, but it was believed tonight the city was out of danger.

Former House Member Dies.

York, S. C., June 3 (AP).—Paul G. McCorkle, 70, coroner of York County and a member of Congress for a brief unexpired term in 1917, died here today following an extended illness.

Johnson Calls Peacemakers In Steel Row

NRA Chieftain Summons Arbiters to Conference Early This Week.

Employers' Statement Avers Open Shop Big Controversy Issue.

Threat of a paralyzing steel strike June 15 caused the Administration yesterday to summon peace-makers in preparation for a week of the most intensive strike negotiations yet recorded.

With the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers' declaration in his pocket, demanding reopening of the revised steel code, NRA Administrator Hugh S. Johnson summoned leaders of the Iron and Steel Institute, spokesmen for the employers, to a conference here early this week, it was reported last night.

Meanwhile, Edward F. McGrady, assistant NRA administrator for labor and an old hand at strike settlement, returned hurriedly from San Francisco, where he has been attempting to end the longshoremen's strike.

Employers' Charges.

To complicate prospects, the Iron and Steel Institute issued a statement in New York last night, saying, according to the Associated Press, that the strike threat was due to activities of workers' leaders who sought Governmetn intervention to "maneuver themselves into positions of power and dominance over the steel workers of the Nation."

The statement asserted only one point really was at issue: the closed shop. Agreement to this would be treachery on the part of the employers, because it would force many employes into unions against their wills, the statement said.

Mike Tighe, president of the Amalgamated, stated in Pittsburgh last night he did not contemplate returning to Washington, The Associated Press also reported. Tighe added that NRA had the union demand for reopening of the revised steel code, promulgated by President Roosevelt last week. He said he expected Gen. Johnson to present the demand to the President upon the latter's return from New York today. He gave employers until June 10 to accept union demands.

Back Up Statement.

The declaration backed up an early statement of Tighe's, which said the union had put the responsibility for averting the strike squarely up to Gen. Johnson and President Roosevelt. Tighe said the union was demanding only that the Administration enforce what the union construed to be an NRA guarantee of the right to bargai collectively.

The Tighe statement is less conciliatory in tone than some of the veteran leaders former statements, suggesting he is inclining more and more to the view of the "rank and file" committee, headed by Earl Forbeck. Forbeck's committee last week characterized President Roosevelt's promise to provide elections in steel plants as "bunk."

Many Administration officials believe the Forbec committee, representing the new members who swarmed into the then enfeebled union after NRA guaranteed the right to organize, more nearly reflects the mood of the workers than the Tighe leadership.

If the NRA fails to bring about a satisfactory settlement of the impending steel strike, President Roosevelt probably will have to step in personally.

President's Role.

It is understood, however, that he wishes to avoid assuming the role of final arbiter again if it can be avoided. Some observers thought this came from the fact that dissatisfaction with solution of the automobile crisis has been frequently expressed, in the belief that the right given each group among employes to bargain for themselves runs counter to the earlier interpretation of Section 7 (a), which declared the majority should speak for all.

Other observers held the President wishes to be free to devote himself entirely to the problem of rescuing leigslation likely to get lost in the adjournment shuffle.

So ominous is the steel situation, however, and so many are the branches of business life which would be crippled if the steel industry ceased producing, that it is generally conceded the President will give developments his close personal attention, even if this interest is not made obvious.

Girl Asleep 2 Years Shows Waking Signs

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—Patricia Mcguire, Oak Park's 28-month sleeper, today showed some signs of awakening consciousness.

She raised her fingers and moved one eyebrow when her mother, Mrs. Peter Miley, requested her to. These actions indicating a definite coordination of mind and body are the most promising that she has accomplished since she fell into a deep sleep more than two years ago, her family said.

Roosevelt to Weigh Drought Help Today

Legislators From Stricken Middle West Will Ask $1,000,000,000 Appropriation Before Present Congress Adjourns.

A special White House conference will be held today to discuss immediate steps for effective drought relief.

Farm and relief administrators, members of Congress from the drought States, and key men of the Administration whose departments will be brought into play will consult with President Roosevelt on the needs of the stricken area.

Chief among the matters to be considered is the amount Congress, soon to adjourn, shall be asked to appropriate for a Federal drought relief program.

Administration leaders, assembling facts and figures for the conference, yesterday estimated the need as between $200,000,000 and $500,000,000.

Another group of 30 members of the Senate and House, representing ten of the afflicted States, has placed the figure at around $1,000,000,000.

It is considered certain President Roosevelt will send a special message to Congress during the week, possibly asking as much as half a billion dollars for immediate relief.

Information being hastily gathered here yesterday for submission to the President at today's conference indicated the need was pressing. Advices received at headquarters of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration from Dr. E. W. Sheets, drought relief director at St. Paul, said the situation "continued acute, with additional steps necessary."

Similarly disturbing reports of conditions in the drought area were received by other departments.

At the offices of the Emergency Relief Administration, Hopkins and his assistants were working yesterday to put into effect the "work program" whereby thousands will be employed. While no grants have been made as yet, assignments of $5,476,000 to eleven States will be paid out next week.

Projects include the conservation of water and food, employment of the heads of farm families and cash for those left destitute by the drought.

Legation Aid, Senate Clerk Die in River

Dominican Secretary Is Stricken; Friend Loses Life in Rescue.

A legation official and congressional employe were drowned yesterday in South River near Annapolis, Md., when Don Agustin Acevedo Feliu, First Secretary of the Dominican Legation here, was seized with cramps while swimming, and Erskine McGuire, assistant clerk to the Senate Committee on the Library, died in attempting to rescue him.

The two are said to have gone swimming at 1 p. m. at a place loaned them for the day by Dr. George W. Cox, of 900 New York avenue northwest. Half way to a buoy anchored at the mouth of Duvalls Creek, 150 yards from shore, Feliu is thought to have been seized with cramps. Though both men were described as strong swimmers, McGuire, authorities said, lost his life in the struggle to rescue his companion.

The bodies were recovered two hours later with grappling hooks by S. T. Rawlings, Eastport (Md.) fisherman. Certificates of accidental death were issued by Police Justice Louis M. Hopkins, of Annapolis, acting coroner.

Feliu, who was 28, lived at the Roosevelt Hotel. McGuire, 30, lived at 1109 Sixteenth street northwest. The bodies were taken to John M. Taylor's funeral parlors, Annapolis, to await funeral arrangements.

Thomas Awaiting Death as Defiantly As He Faced Life

Denver, June 3 (AP).—Charles S. Thomas approached death today as he has spent the 84 years of his life—defiant of what he considered insincere or intolerant.

The former Colorado Senator and Governor—a champion of bimetalism while William Jennings Bryan was yet a youth—was reported "a little better" today at his home here, but physicians held scant hopes for his recovery.

"My desire is to die," he said as he pushed away a plate of food proffered by his daughter. "Why, then, should I take food to prolong life?"

In his political career he defied organized labor, war veterans and Presidents alike.

Thomas acquired $120 in gold last year and invited arrest when Federal officials were threatening to prosecute hoarders. His "hoard" was given no attention.

Auto Crashes; Baltimore Men Die in Flames

Two Perish as Roadster Swerves From Road Near Muirkirk.

Swerving from the roadway at high speed, a small roadster crashed headlong into a tree 30 feet from the Washington-Baltimore boulevard near Muirkirk, Md., early yesterday, and in the resulting explosion and fire two Baltimore men were burned to death.

They were identified through license plates on the machine as James Hilton, 21, of 4611 Cedar Gordon road, Baltimore, and Dunlap Titus, 22, who lived with his wife and 9-month-old baby at 1781 Spence street, Morrell Park, Md., a Baltimore suburb.

Hilton, who was driving, is believed to have fallen asleep. The car clipped a tree close by the roadside, plunged into a tree beyond and burst into flames.

David L. Lubar, of the circulation department of The Washington Post, and Albert Alpeistein and Harry Asmer, of Baltimore, attempted a rescue, but were driven back by flames. The Branchville and Laurel fire departments were called, the fire extinguished and the bodies of Titus and Hilton, charred beyond recognition, were taken to the Kaiser funeral parlors in Laurel. There the identity was established by a brother of Hilton.

The accident occurred about 4 a. m. as the men were returning to Baltimore, after spending Saturday in Leesburg, Va., with Titus' parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Titus. Titus was a native of Leesburg and besides his parents, wife and child, is survived by three brothers, T. S. and Albert Titus, of Leesburg, and Farrell Titus, of Washington, and a sister, Jane, of Leesburg.

An investigation of the deaths is being conducted by Corpl. C. W. Cubbage, of the Maryland State Police. An inquest will be held in the house of Justice of the Peace George Phillips, acting coroner, at Berwyn, Md., at 8 p. m. tonight.

Storms Sweep France, Bringing Death to 7

Paris, June 3 (AP).—Seven persons were killed as violent rain, hail and wind storms swept across France over the week-end. Damage to wheat fields, vineyards and orchards will total several hundreds of thousands of dollars, meteorologists estimated.

A woman and two men were killed by lightning. Near Metz three men were buried under an avalanche of sand in a flooded mine, and a child was drowned.

Jaundice Attacks Quintuplets, World Fair Trip Forbidden

Corbell, Ontario, June 3 (AP).—The Dionne quintuplets overnight became afflicted with jaundice and Dr. A. R. Dafoe stated flatly today they must not be exhibited at Chicago's Century of Progress Exposition this summer.

The five little girls, clinging to life with a tenacity that surprises physicians, today were tinged with yellow.

Dr. Dafoe, the country practitioner who attended their birth, hastily prescribed treatment. The new state of affairs is not alarming, the physician said. Jaundice is not unusual in infants a week old, he added, and he does not believe the complication lessens the quintuplets' chances for life.

In other respects the condition of the children, including little Marie, who weighs 1 pound 12 ounces, is unchanged, Dr. Dafoe said.

But taking the children to the Century of Progress, or anywhere outside of Ontario, would be extremely unwise and he will not consent to it, Dr. Dafoe said. Mr. and Mrs. Ovila Dionne are accepting the physician's advice.

A contract with Chicago promoters, which Dionne signed, provides the babies may not be moved without the doctor's consent. Under the agreement, with which Dionne now is reported to be dissatisfied, he was to get $100 a week until mother and children are able to go to Chicago. On arrival there the pay was to be $250 a week and 30 per cent of receipts.

It was said that Dionne believes he could have obtained better terms.

Drought Aid Forces Begin Huge Drive; Rain Is Help

State Governors Take Action as Farmers Pray in Churches.

Weather Bureau Holds Out Hope

Railroads to Cooperate in Shipping Cattle and Forage.

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—A mighty concentration of agencies was under way today to alleviate the ravages of the country's most devastating spring drought in recent history.

The Federal Government, the authorities of the various States afflicted and private agencies were bending their efforts to assuage the effects of the land-parching drought.

Even the weathermen joined in the work. They said apparently the long dry spell was broken in the Rocky Mountain region and scattered rains were reported elsewhere in the stricken territory. Weather observers gave predictions of more rain to come.

While the faithful prayed in churches for rain, the following moves were made to aid farmers who watched their crops wither and their live stock thin:

Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins announced a work relief program for the drought area.

Gov. Floyd Olson of Minnesota mobilized the National Guard to enforce an embargo on shipments of live stock into the State for grazing.

Gov. William B. Langer of North Dakota declared a similar embargo and Wisconsin planned to follow suit tomorrow.

Western railroads announced emergency reduction in rates for shipping starving cattle and much-needed forage.

Game Preserve May Aid.

A conference was under way to form regulations to permit throwing open for regulated grazing the 85,000-acre upper Mississippi River wild life and fish refuge stretching from Wabasha, Minn., to Rock Island, Ill.

Arkansas contributed 20 carloads of hay and cottonseed meal for the South Dakota farmers and other private agencies elsewhere began making donations.

J. H. Lloyd, State drought relief administrator for Illinois, started a damage survey in an effort to place Illinois under the new Federal work program for farmers.

The heaviest rain reported was in Nebraska, where 2 inches fell at Scotts Bluff last night. Other portions of the State saw rain in varying amounts. High winds damaged

Japan Warned To Curb Boats

Rebuke by Soviets Issued for Activities on Amur River.

Moscow, June 3 (U.P.).—The Soviet government tonight delivered a sharp warning to Japan that surveillance of Soviet shores by Manchukuo boats in the Amur River in the Far East must cease.

The warning to Japan followed several shooting incidents involving ships in the river, the border between Manchukuo and Siberia. Moscow admitted last week that troops had fired on Manchukuo vessels, but declared they had failed to heed warnings on approaching the Russian side of the stream.

The Soviet warning to Japan was handed a Japanese diplomatic agent at Harbin, the official communique said.

Several Hurt as Reds Fight Police in Athens

Athens, June 3 (AP).—Three men were wounded by gunfire today when police charged into a communistic demonstration in one of the busiest sections of Athens.

About 300 persons, including 10 women, were taken to police stations. Several policemen were hurt. The disorder occurred as communists protested against world fascist tendencies.

Three Die, Three Hurt In Train Auto Crash

Flint, Mich., June 3 (AP).—Three persons were killed and three others possibly fatally injured in a train-automobile crash at a Grand Trunk Railroad crossing 9 miles from Flint late today.

The dead were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Denton and their daughter. All were Flint residents.

G.O.P. Chiefs In Chicago Aim To Save Party

National Committeemen to Discuss Candidates for Chairmanship.

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—Preliminary steps to rehabilitate the Republican party, following its defeat of 1932, were under discussion today as the National committee gathered for its first meeting in two years.

The meeting will be held Tuesday and George F. Getz, of Chicago, National treasurer, said that 80 or 90 of the 102 members are expected in person, with the remainder voting by proxy.

Getz said it was the hope of the leaders that informal discussions which will be sandwiched in with various social gatherings tomorrow will result in a uniformity of opinion, especially as to the important task of choosing a new chairman, so that the formal session Tuesday will be opened with a set program all arranged.

The meeting was called primarily to select a successor to Everett Sanders, of Washington, former Indiana Congressman, who has resigned as chairman because of illness.

Assistant May Be Named.

Appointment of an assistant chairman, to give full time to his job, choice of an executive committee and a renewal of the proposal to move the committee's National headquarters from Washington to Chicago are also possible agenda proposals.

Various suggestions were floating about as to the possible selection for chairman. The man whom the lightning strikes probably will have to lead the party through the Presidential campaign of 1936. According to some opinion he must be a Westerner or Mid-Westerner. Others assert he must be an outstanding and able figure Nationally, to infuse "new blood" into the party. Another group believes he must be fitted to attack the party's main problem of coalescing its various factions into new harmony.

Candidates frequently mentioned in the presession gossip were Walter J. Kohler, former Governor of Wisconsin, considered to be of the able "business man" type favored by opponents of the New Deal, and James A. Watson, former Senator from Indiana; Col. Theodore Roosevelt, of New York, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Hanford MacNider, of Iowa, former National commander of the American Legion; Walter E. Edge, of New Jersey, former Senator and former Ambassador to France, and Henry P. Fletcher, of Pennsylvania, former Ambassador to Italy. Several others seemed to have supporters also.

No Concerted Action.

The faction controlled by former President Herbert Hoover was reported as favoring Kohler.

"All that, however," Getz said, when asked about the rumors and reports circulating about the meeting, "is just conversation. It represent just individual opinions or hopes, for there has been no concerted action of any sort. We have not even had a committee meeting.

"It will be impossible to form any definite idea of the trend of the committee until the members begin to get together tonight and tomorrow. They are arriving steadily."

Getz said he did not yet know whether the new executive committee will meet after the general session with the campaign committees for Senate and House to discuss the November Congressional elections.

Body in Canoe Tragedy Found

PWA Clerk Was Drowned Saturday in Canal.

The body of Carl N. Jones, 20, who was drowned in the C. and O. canal near Chain Bridge Saturday afternoon when his canoe capsized, was recovered at 11:30 a. m. yesterday.

J. E. Braswell, of 5514 Sherrier place northwest, a cousin, identified the body.

The body was discovered a short distance from the spot where the canoe turned over in sight of four young women. Jones was fishing at the time. He lost his balance, the witnesses said, and the canoe tilted over, throwing him into the water.

Jones came here from Macon, Ga., about eight months ago. He was employed by the Public Works Administration as a clerk. He is survived by two sisters and a brother. Funeral services will be announced.

Father Scoffs at Idea Older Son Is Involved

St. Louis, June 3 (AP).—"I can't believe it," Lucius Payne exclaimed today when informed the bodies of his wife and son had been found at the family home at Los Angeles.

Payne had been in St. Louis on business about two months and had made plans to return to Los Angeles late in June.

"I had a letter from her three days ago," he said, referring to his wife, and declared it contained no indication of fear. He scoffed at the idea any suspicion could be attached to his other son, Louis, 20, who was the object of a police hunt in Los Angeles.

King George Begins Seventieth Year

King George observed the sixty-ninth anniversary of his birth yesterday in the quiet of his family circle at Buckingham Palace. He passed the day reading congratulatory messages from over the world and visiting with a few intimate friends. Today the Empire will celebrate the occasion, according to the Associated Press, and the King will ride at the head of troops in the historic ceremony of trooping colors on the parade grounds of the Horseguard.

Swanson Tells McCarl to Mind Own Business

Navy Secretary Declares Buying of Planes Is His Affair.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary of the Navy Swanson has reminded Comptroller General J. R. McCarl that it is none of his business if the Navy does choose to buy 27 airplanes without competition.

Making public correspondence between the Navy secretary and the Government's chief accounting officer, Representative McFarlane (Democrat), Texas, told newspapermen:

"The exchange shows more clearly that Congress should make it the Comptroller General's business to approve or disapprove Army and Navy airplane contracts."

Under the 1926 aircraft defense act, the Comptroller General has no jurisdiction over Army and Navy airplane purchases. But he wrote to Swanson about a $658,125 contract with the Great Lakes Aircraft Corporation of Cleveland for 27 airplanes and parts.

In the letter, McCarl interpreted the law as requiring competition for quantity airplane procurement, and, referring to the contract, added:

"You are requested to inform me by what authority it is purported to charge appropriated moneys under said agreement to the extent of $658,125, or in any other amount. Pending satisfactory explanation in this matter no credit will be allowed for any payments under the agreement extened without competition."

Swanson replied the law gave him authority to approve the purchase of airplanes for experimental purposes without competition, adding:

"The above mentioned contracts having been entered into under the authority * * * for the procurement of aircraft and aircraft parts for experimental purposes * * * your attention is invited to the fact that under the authority conferred upon me * * * this decision as to the award of such contract * * * is not reviewable by any officer or tribunal of the United States except the President and the Federal courts."

'Old West' Recalled As Cattle Migrate To Escape Drought

Sauke Center, Minn., June 3 (AP). Main street on the "Gopher Praries" is becoming the main street of old again with migrating cattle in these days of parched pasture lands.

Like apage form the past, scenes reminiscent of the days when ox drawn prairie schooners, followed by cow herds, plied the virgin West, are reenacted under the broiling sun that has killed the grass and fodder for Minnesota farm cattle.

Now the lowing herds are back on the move, so is the chuck wagon and the bunk wagon as farmers prod their hungry herds to greener spots for afield, invariably to the North where verdant growth has not been so hard hit as in Southern, Central and Western Minnesota.

400,000 Men On PWA Jobs, Ickes Reports

Total Still Rising, He Says; 664 Projects On; More to Be Awarded.

The number of men employed directly on PWA construction jobs passed 400,000 in May and still is rising rapidly, Public Works Administrator Ickes announced yesterday.

This "key" figure, Ickes said, representing only a fraction of total employment resulting from the PWA program, is climbing as a result of recent weeks of good construction weather. Administrative steps had prevented any marked decline during the "frozen" months, he said.

The PWA director also announced that more than half a billion dollars worth of non-Federal projects are under construction today, in addition to which "well over a billion dollars worth" of Federal work is under construction or under contract.

"The estimated total cost of the 664 non-Federal projects under construction is $504,856,000, or more than 55 per cent of the estimated total cost of the number of non-Federal projects being built with PWA loans and grants," the administrator stated.

"Completing the 664 projects will create 241,000,000 man-hours of direct employment for all classes of workmen on construction sites and probably twice as many man-hours of indirect and industrial employment for both men and women employed in producing, processing and transporting raw and finished materials to be used on construction sites.

"Another 263 projects are ready to go into construction, contracts for the work being awarded, and 137 have been finished. Bids are being advertised for on 323 more projects.

"In addition to all of the non-Federal construction work, well over $1,000,000,000 worth of Federal work is under construction or under contract."

An inspection of the sales notice posted on the door of the villa at Cap d'Ail indicates that merchants have attached venetian furniture, silver plate and engravings.

Codefendants In Arlington's Ouster Ready

Writ of Mandamus to Be Filed Tomorrow in Appeals Court.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Lyman M. Kelley, chairman of the Arlington County board, and his codefendants said yesterday that they are ready to meet the issue when the petition for a writ of mandamus in the board ouster suit is filed in the Supreme Court of Appeal for Virginia at Wytheville tomorrow morning.

Thsi action is being brought by B. M. Smith and Col. Christopher B. Garnett, both of whom were appointed on the board by Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy and who, on last Tuesday, were declared not members of the board by a majority who based their act upon an opinion of Attorney General Abram Staples by the board.

Those named in the petition are Chairman Lyman M. Kelley, Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder, Harry A. Fellows, J. L. May, Edmund D. Campbell and County Manager Roy S. Braden. Campbell and May are the new members who were immediately appointed last Tuesday to fill the vacancies caused by action of the majority members in their attempt to oust Garnett and Smith.

The defendants will be represented in court by Albert Bryant, Commonwealth's Attorney for the Ctiy of Alexandria, and William C. Gloth, former Commonwealth's Attorney for Arlington County. The petitioners will be represented by Johny S. Barbour, of Fairfax; Thomas W. Phillips and Lawrence W. Douglas, of Arlington County.

The deadline for returns on tangibles and intangibles and State incomes has been extended to July 1, Harry K. Green, commissioner of revenue for Arlington County, announced yesterday.

The extension, it is pointed out, is for this year alone and is due to the change in the income law reducing exemptions for married persons from $2,800, plus $400 for dependents, to $4,000, plus $200 for dependents, and single persons from $1,250 to $1,000, plus $200 for dependents.

While there has been no change in the law governing tangibles and intangible property, the extension applies to these classes also because of the fact that the State incomes are made on a three-way interrogatory which includes tangibles and intangiblse.

No further return need be made by taxpayers who have already made their State income and personal property return before notification of the change in the exemptions on incomes.

Commissioner Green said the returns will be corrected at his office and each taxpayer advised if there will be any increases for this year.

Miss Gertrude Beauchamp, recently chosen at "Miss Arlington," will be crowned at a dance and reception in her honor to be given June 16 by Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion at Windsor Tavern. Arrangements are in the hands of a special committee headed by W. E. Nichols, adjutant.

Miss Beauchamp will be attended by 31 maids of honor, all of whom participated in the beauty pageant sponsored by the post at which she was selected. The purpose of the dance is to raise funds to pay the expenses of Miss Beauchamp and her chaperons to the annual American Legion convention in the early fall at Roanoke.

The Guilds of St. Mary's Episcopal Church at Rixey Station and St. John's, of McLean, will hold a joint luncheon meeting and bridge tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Walter T. Weaver on Chain Bridge road.

The Woman's Club of Lyon Park will sponsor a bridge luncheon at 1 p. m. Wednesday at the Community House. Mrs. A. T. Rowell heads the committee in charge.

Reds, Royalists Battle in Paris

Paving Blocks Hurled; Other French Cities Also See Clashes.

Paris, June 3 (AP).—Paving blocks filled the air and clubs were wielded in the streets of Paris today as Communists, Royalists and Socialists engaged in several encounters.

In other parts of France political extremists caused disorders.

The fighting in Paris was a clash of rival bands distributing political newspapers, which were scattered on the pavements as the men charged each other's supplies.

Six identified as Socialists and Communists were arrested.

At Boulogne-sur-Seine fighting groups hurled scrap iron and vegetables at each other.

Communists at Aubervilliers made a determined effort to break up an archery meet. They were repulsed by police who made 50 arrests.

Shouting and singing, the Communists charged a parade of 1,500 bow and arrow marksmen. Police, however, were prepared for the assault. The disorder was witnessed by Cardinal Verdier, who had opened the archery meet, held annually since 1346, with a mass.

Nazis Ban 'Mary Dugan' As Death Penalty Foe

Berlin, June 3 (AP).—The German version of the motion picture, "The Trial of Mary Dugan," was banned from the Reich because it was regarded as a plea against capital punishment, it was learned today.

As such it was contrary to Nazi principles of law enforcement. The conclusion of the play is especially objectionable because it leaves the audience unsympathetic toward punishment by death, the theatrical censor has ruled.

State Funds, Mooney Worry New Governor

Many Problems Are Facing Successor to Rolph, of California.

San Francisco, June 3 (AP).—Frank F. Merriam, Long Beach Republican, who became Governor of California Saturday on the death of James Rolph, jr., faced a variety of problems today, among them the State's financial difficulties and an almost certain renewal of pleas for clemency in the Tom Mooney case.

Declining comment upon any of the State issues until the Rolph funeral is held and he has had a chance to accustom himself to the governorship, Merriam remained in southern California today to teach his Sunday school class. He arranged, however, to be in San Francisco tomorrow, when public funeral services for Rolph will be held. Afterward he will go to Sacramento, the State capital.

Fresh Appeal Expected.

Merriam hardly can avoid a fresh appeal for the release of Mooney, convicted with Warren K. Billings, of bombing the San Francisco preparedness day parade of 1916. Intermittently through the years Mooney's defenders have sought to have governors and the State Federal courts act to free him from a life sentence. Only two weeks ago the Federal District Court declined to act in habeas corpus proceedings.

Merriam's attitude toward Mooney and Billings has not been made public. Rolph, who respited many slayers when he was convinced they killed without premeditation or because of the "unwritten law," steadfastly refused to act in the bombing cases.

Three of Rolph's predecessors also considered Mooney's plea for pardon and denied it.

Money Problems Acute.

The State's financial problems, also pressing upon Merriam, remain acute despite enactment of extra taxes by a special session of the Legislature last year. Merriam's own political future is at stake in his actions—he is one of several aspirants for the Republican nomination for Governor.

Rolph's body lay in state today beneath the city hall dome.

National Guardsmen, city policemen and firemen, legionnaires and United States soldiers formed a guard of honor. After the public funeral services tomorrow, private services will be held from the family home Tuesday with interment at Woodlawn Cemetery to follow.

Rolph, 64, died yesterday afternoon at the Santa Clara County ranch home of a friend, Walter Linforth, after an illness which had its inception last February.

Farmer, 92, Pulls His Ancient Pistol To Route 5 Bandits

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—Simultaneously todayfi George M. Jackson celebrated his ninety-second birthday and single-handed victory over five bandits, many years his junior.

The bandits drove up to the home of Jackson, pioneer Spring Lake, Ill., farmer, Saturday when his children were away. Finding the aged man alone, they forced their way in and demanded his savings.

"They're in the bank," Jackson countered. Unbelieving, the bandits ransacked the house.

Jackson produced an ancient, large-caliber revolver and prodded the nearest robber.

"This old gun hasnt missed fire since 1869 and it isn't likely to now," he sputtered angrily. The robbers fled.

Drought Relief Forces Launch Huge Program to Aid Farms

communications and hail battered the drought-blighted crops, but the storm still was a boon to farmers.

There were light rains in northern and central Wisconsin, thunder showers in Indiana, Missouri and Illinois and most of the Midwest veered from stabbing sun to unsettled or cloudy weather.

C. A. Donnel, chief of the Weather Bureau here, said that June in this region was the month to expect more rains normally than in May. He pointed also to the cheering precedent that only two years since 1871 had been so niggardly as to produce less than two-thirds of the normal 19.3 inches of rain expected in the growing season.

Generally cooler weather prevailed over the Midwest where for days a flaming sun beat down without mercy, shoving temperatures to all time high records.

The 100-degree heat wave of last week caused upward of 50 deaths, but the temperatures Sunday toppled to the comfort zone most places. At noon Chicago had an unofficial reading of 75; in St. Paul it was about 88, and it was 86 unofficially at Omaha with a light rain starting.

Light rains in Missouri and Kansas gave relief from heat. There was a 0.75-inch rain at Springfield, Mo., and 0.07 at Kansas City.

At New York City, where thousands stood in line to view the fleet, a scorching sun caused 21 prostrations.

Price-Fixing In Cottonseed Trade Charged

Plot to Hinder Competition Is Laid to 3 Major Associations.

Conspiracy to hinder competition in purchase of cottonseed was charged yesterday by the Federal Trade Commission against three large cottonseed associations, comprising a membership of virtually all crushing mills in the industry.

The groups charged with attempting to form a price-fixing monopoly are the National Cottonseed Products Association, the Texas Cottonseed Crushers Association and the Oklahoma Cottonseed Crushers Association.

According to the complaint, these associations held meetings systematically to exchange information regarding cottonseed prices. Agreements between them have "unreasonably restricted the freedom of individual mills and milling companies to compete with each other as to prices and otherwise," the commission found.

The complaint charged that the associations "cooperatively adopted and operated devices for automatically fixing and regulating the price of cottonseed in carload lots within their respective territories."

The commission explained the devices consisted of "posting and publishing on the Dallas Cotton Exchange, Houston Merchants Exchange, New Orleans Cotton Exchange and Little Rock Cotton Exchange the carlot prices, which the terminal mills or assaciation representatives decided would provide a satisfactory profit to the mills after deducting from the value of poducts from a ton of seed the cost crushing and tansportation."

Although no transactions took place on the posted prices, the commission charged, the associations withheld and "suppressed posting or publication of prices actually being paid which were higher than they thought should be paid."

The complain alleged that member mills of the associations agreed to maintain posted prices as "thei purchase prices in individual transactions and it was their purpose to have said posted prices automatically become the market price as a matter of custom and tacit understanding without necessity of general conferences or formal agreements."

Senate Action Seen on Bonus

Shipstead Says He Will Move for Committee Discharge This Week.

A motion to discharge the Senate Finance Committee from consideration of the Patman bonus bill will be made this week by Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, according to a statement yesterday by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The latest VFW poll shows over 50 senators ready to vote "aye" on the motion to discharge, the statement said.

The organization reports "definite assurance from members of the Progressive-Democratic coalition in the Senate, who are seeking a vote on the measure," that the discharge motion would be brought before the Senate after it votes on the reciprocal tariff measure.

Senator Shipstead was quoted as saying:

"As soon as the vote on the tariff bill is completed, I will seek the floor to move the discharge of the finance committee. We are not asking for a debate. We are asking for a vote."

D. C. Man Flees Jail in Virginia

He and Another Prisoner Sawed Bar From Cage in Front Royal.

Front Royal, Va., June 3 (Spl.). Louis Ferro, Washington, white, under sentence of six months on the Virginia road force for the theft of Senator Aubrey G. Weaver's car here, and Melvin Mason, Front Royal, colored, sentenced to one year on the State roads for assault with a knife, broke jail here last night.

When Jailer W. W. Cameron answered a call from the jail room he left the door open and went to the rear of the jail to investigate. The two fugitives, concealed behind the cage near the door, then made their successful dash for liberty. They had previously gained the corridor by sawing out a bar of the cage. Isaac Townley, colored, under sentence of 42 years for murder, made no attempt to escape. The escaped prisoners, who were sentenced on last Monday, have not been caught.

U. S. Offering $800,000,00n Notes, Bonds

June Financing Raises Government Debt to Record Peak.

(United Press.)

The Government last night called on private investors for $800,000,000 more to finance recovery costs.

That amount of new borrowing was provided in the Treasury's long-awaited June financing operations.

The $800,000,000 will boost the Treasury's ready cash to $2,010,550,698, placing it in a position to meet mounting recovery and relief expenditures this summer. Expenditures are running about $500,000,000 a month. This cash is aside from the $2,000,000,000 more derived from gold devaluation profits and held in a separate currency stabilization fund.

The new borrowing will carry the Federal debt to the highest level in history. Floating the new issues will make a total debt of $28,955,017,448. The war-time peak, and previous high record, was $26,596,701,648. President Roosevelt has set $31,834,000,000 as the "outside limit" of the debt to be incurred in completing the recovery program.

Exchange Also Offered.

Along with the new borrowing, the Government offered holders of $520,000,000 in maturing Government obligations over the next six weeks the privilege of exchanging them into a new issue of 3 per cent 12 to 14 year bonds.

The $800,000,000 will be raised through the sale of $500,000,000 of five-year 2½ per cent notes and $300,000,000 of 12 to 14 year 3 per cent bonds, similar to those offered for exchange for the maturing obligations. The offering of bonds is the first direct sale of such securities since $755,481,350 of "Mellon 3s" were floated in September, 1931.

No provision is made in the June financing for refunding the $1,200,000,000 of called Fourth Liberty Loan 4¼ per cent bonds, which fall due Octoger 15. Refunding of these securities at a lower interest rate is expected before the maturity date.

Can Get 3 Per Cent Bonds.

The Treasury is offering holders of the $174,905,500 of ¼ per cent Treasury certificates, due June 15, and the $345,292,600 of 2½ per cent Treasury notes, due August 1, the privilege of exchanging their securities for the 3 per cent bonds.

A further bid for the participation of the "small investor" in the cash sale of the 3 per cent bonds was seen in the issuance of these securities in as low a denomination as $50 and by provisions whereby all subscriptions up to $10,000 will be given "preferred allotment." The five-year notes will be issued in denominations of as low as $100 with equal preferred allotment for the small buyers.

The bonds will be dated June 15, 1934, with the 3 per cent interest payable semiannually. They will mature June 15, 1948, but may be redeemed on and after June 15, 1946, on four months' notice. The notes are dated June 15, 1934, and bear interest at the rate of 2½ per cent, payable semiannually. Both issues are being sold at par.

League Moves To Block Strife In Saar Voting

Punishment Provided for French or German Intimidation.

Geneva, June 3 (AP).—The League of Nations revealed today the full extent of the extraordinary precautions taken to avoid trouble between Germany and France over the Saar Plebiscite, set for Sunday, January 13, 1935.

Although a project for international policing during the plebiscite has been voted down by the League Council, machinery is provided to inflict heavy fines and imprisonment upon those found indulging in intimidations or reprisals in the vote.

The plebiscite, in which the population of the rich Saar Basin, estimated in 1926 at 770,000, will vote on whether to return to German control or remain under French supervision within jurisdiction of a League Commission, promises to be one of next year's most interesting international events.

Exclusive rights to exploitation of the Saar coal mines were given to France by the Treaty of Versailles as compensation for destruction of coal mines in the north of France during the war.

Until the plebiscite, the Saar will be governed by a commission of five appointed yearly by the League of Nations.

Detailed and repeated charges have been made that pressure was being brought upon Saar residents, by propaganda and otherwise, and that efforts would be made during the plebiscite to influence the vote.

The League's regulations provide a specially created supreme plebiscite tribunal with eight divisions which will continue to function for one year after the plebiscite.

This court will pass judgment upon allegations of reprisals either by Germans or French.

If a dispute arises between Germany and France concerning interpretation of the regulations, they agree to submit it to the world court at The Hague for arbitration.

States Frown on Signboards

Tourists' Vision Less Marred Today by Unsightly Highway Markers as Public Fights Erection of Structures.

Chicago, June 3 (A.P.).—Summer tourists will find in their travels over several additional States this year a greater absence of advertising sign obstructions.

While no intensive campaign has been recently waged on a National scale against such signs, several States have been spurred by garden and women's clubs and other civic bodies to reduce the number of highway billboards.

Highway advertising is barred in Vermont, while in Minnesota, North Carolina, Idaho, Kansas, Montana, Oregon, Utah and Wyoming billboards on State rights-of-way are prohibited.

Signs Removed.

The New York State Public Works Department reported "thousands" of billboards have been removed as a result of recently enacted laws giving the State superintendent of public works the right to order removal of signs.

New Hampshire reports a steady decrease in number of highway signs this year, despite the absence of any concerted movement against them.

Chief Highway Engineer Ernst Lieberman, of Illinois, said that the State's campaign to remove bill boards and other advertising from State highways within the corporate limits of cities and villages is now 95 per cent effective, and that the State law prohibiting signs along highways is being enforced in rural areas.

Kansas and Idaho prevent by statute the erection of billboards along rights-of-way. Advertising signs may be erected only on private property at the edge of the rights-of-way with the consent of property owners. However, where the signs mar scenic beauty, the State also plants trees on the rights-of-way in front of the signs.

Women Aid Fight.

Women's clubs in Texas have succeeded partially in ridding highways of signboards. Political placards along State routes are banned. Garden clubs have been active in Tennessee, Indiana and Ohio. In Virginia, Maine and Kentucky the question has been before the legislatures, but proposals to remove the signs failed of enactment.

North Carolina and California license billboards, thereby swelling revenues by making such advertisers contribute to the State exchequers. The former has a rate of $1 per board or $580 for a Statewide privilege. The latter collects $17,350 annually in fees.

Congress End June 15 Hinges On 'Mush' Bills

House and Senate Leaders Plan Conference With Roosevelt Today.

Adjournment of Congress by June 15 depends on how much of the remaining Administration legislation program that President Roosevelt insists on seeing enacted before releasing members for their campaign activities.

A conference between the President and Senate and House leaders is scheduled today, it was learned las tnight. On the outcome of the conference possably hinges the date of adjournment. June 9 as a goal has been virtually abandoned; June 15 is still looked upon hopefully by Hill leaders.

Cherished measures which, it is believed, the White House will have to abandon unless Congress sits until around July 1 include the Wagner trade disputes bill, the Administration's housing program, the oil control bill and amendments to strengthen the legal position of the AAA.

Leaders Hopeful.

Without these potentially explosive measures, some Congressional leaders think adjournment this coming Saturday still may be possible. It ise believed, however, that the President attaches great importance to them, particularly to the first two. The growing wave of strikes is creating stronger sentiment for the Wagner bill, while the Administration is known to believe considerable business pick-up will result from the housing program, if undertaken.

Majority leaders Joe Robinson and Joseph Byrns conferred yesterday and today will lay before the President the results of their check.

A vote in the Senate on the reciprocal tariff bill is scheduled for not later than 5 p. m. today. On Tuesday, the Senate is slated to devote itself to consideration of the House-approved measure to make silver 25 per cent of the Nation's monetary stock. Senate action on the relief appropriation measure is likely Wednesday or Thursday.

Operating under a drastic gag rule, the toughest since the days of Uncle Joe Cannon, the House is keyed for fast action on all remaining pieces of legislation.

Deficiency Bill.

The $1,178,000,000 deficiency bill, with its potential $600,000,000 relief authorization through use of RFC borrowing power and unused PWA money, is sure to receive House approval today. Action in the House on the controversial Wagner bill and on the housing program can be obtained before the week is out, leaders agreed yesterday, pointing out that the Senate is the problematical factor in the quick passage of these measures.

Important measures already passed by both houses and now in conference for ironing out operations include the $440,000,000 loans to industry measure, continuation of the temporary bank deposit insurance act and the communications bill.

Another stumbling block in the path of speedy Senate action is the confirmation of Rexford Guy Tugwell to be Undersecretary of Agriculture. Tugwell is now Assistant Secretary. The nomination creates a new post and carries with it $2,500 a year extra. The Senate Agriculture Committee is still considering the White House request. Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, is opposed to indorsement.

PWA Speeds Master Units

Boulder Dam Is Two Years Ahead of Schedule; Others Pushed.

Construction of the master units in the system of public owned power plants being erected in the South and West by the Federal Government is being pushed rapidly, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes disclosed yesterday.

Boulder Dam, gigantic undertaking which will furnish water and power to the Southwest, already is two years ahead of schedule with Public Works Administration help. At the site of another huge undertaking, that of the Grand Coulee hydroelectric development on the Columbia River in eastern Washington, a town to accommodate 6,000 persons is being laid out preparatory to construction of the Grand Coulee Dam.

Meanwhile, prepartions for the Fort Peck Dam in eastern Montana, and the Casper-Alcova irrigation and power project in Wyoming are being rushed. The Fort Peck project, in addition to controlling flood waters of the Missouri River for 1,100 miles, will provide irrigation for the dry Montana section, and will develop thousands of horsepower of electric energy for public use.

The most outstanding progress reported by Secretary Ickes was that on the Boulder Dam pob. About half the concrete for this project now is in place, the Interior Secretary disclosed, and storage of water in the reservoir probably will begin late this summer.

Rapid advance of the work was attributed partially to PWA allotments amounting to $38,000,000.

Secretary Ickes said the PWA allotments for the dam being constructed by the United States Bureau of Reclamation eventually will save money, as revenues from power to be produced will come in sooner. About 5,000 men now are employed at the dam and the Secretary estimated 10,000 others are employed directly producting materials.

Activity of the PWA in erecting power dams will leave the Nation with a heritage of strategically located, publicly owned power sites. The network of the Tennessee Valley Authority plants, Boulder Dam, Grand Coulee, the Bonneville, Oreg., development, which now is being surveyed; the Fort Peck and the Wyoming power plants will furnish millions of horsepower of electrical energy, all of which, under present plans, will be hold for public purposes.

Britain Takes Solitary Peace Role in Crisis

London Shifts Its Foreign Policy in Attempt to Maintain Balance.

London, June 3 (AP).—Great Britain, in an adjustment of her foreign policy, has assumed the role of a lone-wolf arbiter of world peace, in an endeavor to weather the storm and wield the balance of power in the rapidly shifting scene of international politics.

Statements of government leaders and the reaction here to various movements of Europe and Far Eastern nations, and the United States, indicate that Britain is looking about for ways to offset the strength of new alliances, political fronts, or friendly relationships.

Downing Street is keeping the closest watch on French maneuvers to surround Germany with French allies, plainly regarding that strategy as aimed not only at boxing Hitlerism in, but permitting Paris to take over the leadership of continental politics.

The new policy last week withstood the French attack at Geneva on the statements of Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon, relative to the Franco-German arms controversy.

At the same time the British are giving considerable attention to the naval strength of world powers which shortly will begin preliminary conversations here relative to the 1934 conference.

Far Eastern problems also are receiving careful attention. It is noted in foreign quarters that Britain's exceedingly warm policy toward Japan has withstood not only the resumption of diplomatic relations between Soviet Russia and the United States, but a trade war between Britain herself and Japan. Britain's arbiter role is plainly apparent in the disarmament situation.

Underneath it all, Britain's major policy is apparent—to keep any new international combinations from becoming too powerful and menacing world peace.

Toledo Auto-Lite Strike Nears End

Tentative Agreement Wins Support of Workers.

Toledo, Ohio, June 3 (AP).—A tentative agreement for settling the strike of automotive workers in three Toledo parts factories continued to be the subject of conferences today, but Sanction of the plan by all groups was not expected before tomorrow.

The proposal which the executive committee of the Automotive Workers' Federal Union said was approved by a "substantial majority" last night in a vote was submitted today to the Electric Auto-Lite Council, which strikers have called a "company union."

Details of the proposal, expected to end a walkout which brought disorders in which two were killed, are secret.

Mate Faces Trial On Rich Singer's Extortion Charge

Rome, June 3 (AP).—Young Pietro Vernati, who once was denied a court decision to prevent the singer, Louisa Tetrazzini from "squandering her money," was bound over for trial on charges of extortion in a decision published today.

Vernati is married to the famous singer, although they are separated. Last fall he went to court arguing that Mme. Tetrazzini, whose fortune once was placed at $5,000,000, gave money away right and left because of an hallucination.

Mme. Tetrazzini's lawyers countered with the claim that Vernati was attempting to extort money from his wife. These charges were found to be sufficiently substantial to hold Vernati for trial.

Spirit of South Nation's Need, Veterans Told

Senator Connally Lauds Living and Dead at Arlington.

America is in need today of the patriotism displayed by the Confederate soldier, Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, said yesterday at Confederate memorial services at Arlington Cemetery, where veterans who followed the war flags of the South gathered with a thousand others to pay homage to dead comrades.

"We come to salute gallant men on the birthday of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy," Senator Connally said, "whether they wore the stars of a general or the humble gray jacket of the private.

"Patriotism displayed from Bull Run through the final struggles serves to remind sons and daughters of the Confederacy that the Confederate soldier is a symbol of courage, fortitude and honor that must never die in the republic.

"The cause for which they fought and died has been called erroneously a 'lost cause.' No cause is lost that can give to history such examples of heroism on the battlefield and at home. No cause is lost when defended by such gallant followers of war banners. Nor can a cause be called lost when such military strategies were produced and such leaders as Lee and Jackson."

Eyes of the handful of soldiers of the sixties, survivors of Camp 171, United Confederate Veterans, misted with recollections at the strains of "Dixie" played by the United States Marine Band. But the rancor was gone.

"They are one today, wearers of the Blue and the Gray," Senator Connally said, "united in the last long sleep as their survivors and descendants are in a common welfare. A Nation once divided is one in common interests.

"Gone is the bitterness that for a half-century prevented Jefferson Davis' name being restored to the tablet at Cabin John Bridge. And be it to the credit of Theodore Roosevelt that the restoration was ordered. Today, Davis is known as one of the greatest citizen soldiers since Caesar led his legions into Gaul."

Senator Connally was introduced by E. M. Waller, Camp 171. The invocation was by Dr. G. A. Berry, Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, and the benediction by Dr. John E. Briggs, Fifth Baptist Church. Wreaths were placed on the tombs of Gen. Joe Wheeler and the Unknown Soldier.

Normal Course To BeExtended In Maryland

Salisbury School Will Give Bachelor of Science College Degree.

Salisbury, Md., June 3 (Spl.).—The Maryland State Normal School here next September will begin a curriculum leading to the degree of bachelor of science in elementary education.

Lengthening of the course is the result of action taken by the Maryland State board of education, when it was voted that the three white normal schools be converted into full course colleges for teachers. The other two institutions are located at Towson and Frostburg.

The teacher-training school on the Eastern Shore of Maryland was opened in September, 1925. The State board of education in 1931 extended the course to three years, completion of which qualified the student to receive an advanced first-grade teacher's certificate.

By requiring the four-year curriculum, it is thought that the teachers' horizon will be widened.

The class to be graduated June 11 totals 52 members, 14 of whom are from the Western Shore of Maryland. The other 38 represent eight of the nine counties of the Eastern Shore.

State Policeman's Cycle Wrecked; 3 Charges Filed

Westminster, Md., June 3 (Spl.). A damaged automobile, a partially wrecked State police motorcycle and charges of reckless driving, driving under the influence of liquor and failing to stop after an accident, gave Howard L. Mathias, of Baltimore, something to think about over the week-end, according to B. C. Mason, State officer.

Mason said Mathias ran into a car owned by Hugh M. Hughes, of Whiteford, and then proceeded, but on the wrong side of the road. A combination of whistle and siren finally got Mathias stopped, but only temporarily, for when he alighted from his motorcycle, the officer stated, Mathias' car rolled backwards down a hill and directly over the State machine.

Theory Switch Of Two Parties Is Held Remote

Rumbling Can Mean Little to Virginia for Long Time to Come.

(The Monday review of Virginia politics, a weekly feature of The Post, by J. K. Irving, jr., hereafter will appear under a Lynchburg date line, Mr. Irving having moved there from Charlottesville last week.)

By J. K. Irving, jr.

Lynchburg, Va., June 3.—Politically observant Virginians who have been watching with interest the "stop and go" processes of the present Administration are regarding with more amusement than gravity, perhaps, the possibility of a Hamiltonian Democracy and a Jeffersonian Republicanism.

Such a reversal of theory, of course, would mean but little to the average voter except to add to the obfuscations under which he has always labored; he will, in the end, vote as always for the party label, which has little or nothing to do either with the late Mr. Jefferson or with his honorable contemporary, Mr. Hamilton. Still it is something to talk about in the dull interim between the adjournment of Congress and the actual beginning of hostilities preceding the primary and leading up to the November election.

This highly anomalous trend of reasoning found its most definite expression recently in Richmond when Republican Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, addressing a gathering of Republican women of Virginia, said this: "I hope the Republicans of Virginia will nominate their ablest and strongest candidates for Congress, and come out openly in defense of Jefferson principles of government and above all for the preservation of the integrity of the Constitution."

Fish Praises Senators.

The foregoing followed high praise by Representative Fish of the stand taken by Senators Glass and Byrd for fighting "the brainstorms of the brain trust." Concurrently it is noted that Democratic Representative Terrell of Texas, in a farewell speech to Congress predicted a reversal of policies and principles—"the Democratic party advocating a strong central government of the Hamiltonian type and the Republican party advocating Jeffersonian principles of States rights and individual liberty."

But despite their ominous sound and their distinguished sources, these utterances can mean little in the Virginia situation certainly for a long time to come.

Mr. Fish, for example, praised Senators Glass and Byrd not because he was personally and politically inclined to it, but rather for the simple reason that there was nothing else for him to do. Irrespective of party affiliation, Senator Byrd's opposition to the AAA amendments, which received the immediate and hearty backing of Senator Glass, was welcomed with enthusiasm by the great majority of Virginia voters.

Adroit Move Seen.

The fact that the nine Democratic candidates are just as solidly with him on that question, however, can add but little to the strength of the "ablest and strongest" the Republicans can produce for the Congressional race. It was much more adroit, though, than an attempt to discount the State's representation.

It must be remembered that President Roosevelt and his general program are still popular in Virginia and not yet is the White House blamed for the iniquitous amendments. Their relegation, for the time at least, means a continuance of administrative popularity as well as a more pronounced approval of incumbent representation. It is probably not shooting wide of the mark to say that in general opinion the Virginia Senators have succeeded in steering President Roosevelt and his advisers safely around a dangerous shoal.

The vessel, if weather and tide conditions permit, will arrive at base tomorrow abou. 8:30 a. m. She is to berth at Pier 7. On board the ship will be Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., who will deliver the craft to the Navy.

The Ranger carries 72 planes. She is a vessel of 15,000 tons and her stipulated speed is 29½ knots, which was exceeded on her recent trial trip. A crew of 1,100 will include the aviators and mechanics attached to the aerial forces on board.

Maryland Birth Rate Falls To New Low at Start of 1934

Averages 16.1 Per 1,000 Population to Establish Record; State Health Officer Praises Work of County Organizations.

Baltimore, June 3 (Spl.).—Maryland's birthrate fell to a new low during the first quarter of 1934, it has just been revealed by the State Health Department.

The rate for the counties of the State was 16 births per 1,000 population; for Baltimore the ratio was 16.2 per thousand. The average for the entire State, 16.1, is the lowest ever recorded in Maryland.

St. Marys County took first place in births per 1,000 population, with 28.3. Frederick County was next, with 27, and Baltimore County was lowest, with a ratio of only 9.1. Officials of the health department explained this, however, by saying a majority of mothers living in areas adjacent to the city come to Baltimore to have their babies.

To show how great the decline in birth ratio has been for the first quarter of this year, the health officials pointed out that the ratio for the first quarter of last year was 17.6 births per 1,000 population for the city and 17.2 for the counties.

Deaths in the counties were lower than in the city for the quarter-year, the health department also announced. For the city, the ratio was 14.9 per 1,000 population, for the counties 12.5, establishing an average 13.7 for the State.

In infant mortality, Garrett County ranked lowest, with a rate of 30.1 per every 1,000 births. Worcester County was highest, with 172.

Dr. Robert H. Riley, State health officer, reported that in his opinion the county health organization throughout the State is showing a marked increase in efficiency. Every county now has a full-time health officer, he said, and an active campaign is under way to reduce the tuberculosis death toll.

Man Arrested On Bank Charge

Minneapolis Police Nab Suspect in Winchester Check Fraud.

Winchester, Va., June 3 (Spl.).—George R. Shepherd, alias J. H. Stanley, said to be from Cumberland, Md., who came to Winchester last December with plans for a large manufacturing plant here and who is alleged to have mulcted a local bank out of $420 through a worthless check, has been apprehended in Minneapolis, police here said.

Chief of Police C. W. Hollis of Winchester said he received a telegram from Minneapolis police that Shepherd was arrested by Minnesota officers north of Atlantic City while he was on a fishing trip. Shepherd is being held in Minneapolis and officers there say that Shepherd has agreed to waive extradition and return to Virginia for immediate trial.

On receipt of intimation of Shepherd's arrest, plans were started here by Commonwealth's Attorney James P. Reardon to present evidence to the grand jury which convenes in corporation court tomorrow. If the grand jury indicts Shepherd a bench warrant will be issued for him and a Winchester officer will go to Minneapolis for the accused.

Shepherd represented himself to Winchester business men last December as representing the Stanley Tool & Hardware Co., of New Britain, Conn. He made arrangements for the purchase of the old fair grounds from a local bank upon which he said he was going to build a Stanley unit. Before leaving the city he had a check for $420 cashed. The check later proved worthless.

Bullets in Trees Recall Time Lee Beat Grant at Cold Harbor

Ashland, Va., June 3 (Spl.).—Bullets fired by Confederate soldiers at the masses of Gen. Grant's soldiers making the last charge at Cold Harbor at the height of the battle from June 1 to 3, 1864, have been found in logs by workers at the Citizens Service Exchange.

The bullets were found deeply imbedded in the heart of timber cleared from Cold Harbor Park drives. The Battle of Cold Harbor, one of the bloodiest of the Civil War, occurred when Grant's Army of the Potomac met the Army of Northern Virginia, under Gen. Robert E. Lee.

The lead slugs were sunk far within the trees, which must have been saplings at the time of battle. Their depth in the wood was a dependable index of the date of lodgment.

The Federal forces lost 10,000 men in their brief charge, more soldiers falling, it is estimated, in the first 15 minutes than in any other similar period throughout the war.

Eleven bullets in a short run of timber evidenced the intensity of the fire Gen. Grant's forces encountered in their fierce assault, generally considered the greatest mistake of the Union leader's career. Grant himself afterward said: "It is, I think, the only battle I ever fought which I would not fight over under the circumstances. I have always regretted that the last assault at Cold Harbor was ever made."

Hopewell Mill Chief Rejects U. S. Mediation

Employes Name Committee After Voting to Strike by Large Margin.

Hopewell, Va., June 3 (AP).—In a series of hasty and informal conferences today, seven members of the Hopewell Local of the Textile Workers Union pondered the situation created by a 98.5 per cent strike vote, a mediation offer by the National Labor Board and the rejection of that offer by Manager Raymond S. Burrows, of the Tubize Chatillon Corporation.

Into the hands of that committee the unionized employes placed the power to call out the union on strike. When they were appointed the seven employes did not know that Burrows had rejected the compromise plan, put forward by the governmental mediation agency in Washington Friday.

Meanwhile, some resentment flared among workers over a plant circular, which they interpreted as a lockout threat. The document was handed to workers yesterday by Burrows and warned them that if the plant was closed by a strike "no agency, no power or law can compel us to reopen it against our will."

Charles J. Hughes, speaking for the union, said:

"Perhaps no power can compel the company to operate the plant, but the Government can prevent its reopening until the authority of the National Labor Board is respected."

Hughes, past president of the Virginia Federation of Labor, and R. T. Bowden, special representative of the same organization, spoke at a mass meeting.

Bowden reported to the union members on the Friday conference in Washington and quoted counsel for the National Labor Board as saying: "The executive order of April 12, this year, gives the National Board the jurisdiction which the attorney for the Tubize Corporation denies it possesses."

Hughes urged the workers to avoid a strike by all "honorable means," but advised them that if they were forced into one they would have the Virginia Federation of Labor behind them.

"The manager of the Tubize plant is responsible for this trouble, not the union. A strike at the plant will cost even for a temporary shutdown, about $100,000. And Mr. Burrows will lose his job, because he proved himself incompetent to handle the situation that caused the loss."

State Labor Commissioner John Hopkins Hall attended the meeting as an observer at the request of Gov. George C. Peery.

Ritchie's Foes Assert Voters Favor Jackson

Bulletin Declares Governor Could Win Battle for Senate.

Baltimore, June 3 (Spl.).—An overwhelming sentiment in Maryland for nomination of Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, as the Democratic candidate for Governor, was claimed yesterday by Jackson headquarters.

Assailing the fifth-term candidacy of Gov. Ritchie, as inspired by "a huge political machine," a bulletin cited a straw vote taken in Allegany County about which, it was charged, "Gov. Ritchie has intimate knowledge."

"Fifty-three Allegany County Democrats, encountered at random by a canvasser opposed to Mayor Jackson," reads the bulletin, "expressed themselves as follows:

"For Jackson, 50.

"For Ritchie, 3.

The bulletin claims that this is "no isolated case—no sudden and accidental violation of the law of averages. Every effort to get a cross-section of public sentiment anywhere in the counties, no matter how restricted or how broad the survey, has brought a result, which, if not comparable in decisiveness, has had the same meaning: Opposition to a fifth term."

It is suggested that Gov. Ritchie would do well to abandon his fight for reelection and should run for the United States Senate, a place which, the Jackson bulletin concedes, the Governor could win easily. Sentiment for Jackson did not become crystallized, the bulletin says, until Ritchie announced himself for a fifth term.

Among the county organizations favoring Jackson is listed the Allegany County Jackson-for-Governor Club, headed by Fuller Bernard, Dr. Thomas W. Koon, James C. Shriver, Joseph Craddock and John Howe.

12-Hour Visit Paid Old Home By Roosevelt

Short Stop Hailed as Desire to See Congress End Session Quickly.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Aboard Presidential Special Train En Route to Washington, June 3.—President Roosevelt today returned to his Hudson Valley home at Hyde Park for the first time since October, and then, less than 12 restful hours later, entrained for Washington, which he will reach early tomorrow.

Back again at the White House, he will plunge into conferences with Senate and House leaders in an effort to determine what remaining Administration legislation will be sought before adjournment of Congress.

From the fact that the President restricted his flying visit to Hyde Park to a scant half day, it was apparent he wishes Congress to wind up this session as soon as possible, perhaps at the end of the week. Whether this can be done, howl ever, will depend in a large on what measures are labeled "must."

Mother Is Greeted.

Arriving at the little station of his home place early this morning after an overnight trip from Groton, Mass., the Jresident was greeted by his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, and a group of old neighbors.

To revert once more to the role of country gentleman, however briefly, the President crossed parts of three States during the night after attending Memorial Day exercises at Gettysburg, the United States fleet review off New York harbor, and closing ceremonies at Groton School.

Tonight will be the fourth successive night he will have spent on the train, which has shuttled about the North Atlantic States since last Wednesday. Although silent on all questions arising during his absence, the President has maintained close contact with administration leaders.

Looks Over the Crops.

With the sole purpose of rest, the President remained within the broad acres of Krum Elbow all day. During the afternoon he went for a short motor ride about the roads which divide his fields of grains. He also looked over the cattle.

Ever conscious of the troublous problems of Washington, however, he left tonight soon after dining at home in order to be at his desk early in the morning. One of the first he will see will be Harry L. Hopkins, erlief administrator, on the latter's plans for the relief of drought-stricken farmers of the West, which may require legisla-

Other legislation not in an advanced stage which the President is understood to have tagged "must" are the bills to enable housing loans, to protvide control of oil production, and to authorize the creation of five new judgeships where Federal dockets are crowded.

Three More Bills Wait.

Three more bills which have passed one house and which the President is understood to want adopted before adjournment are those giving him tariff bargaining power, increasing the use of silver as a monetary base, and appropriating $1,322,000,000 for relief activities during the year beginning July 1.

While many believe an adjournment by June 9 is out of the question, the President undoubtedly is anxious to hasten it.

As soon as Congress does adjaourn, it is generally understood the President will return to Hyde Park before leaving for his cruise to the West Indies and the Pacific, now set for about June 26. He may be able to return before June 16, when the intercollegiate regatta is held at nearby Poughkeepsie.

But whether or not Mr. Roosevelt can attend this racing event, he is counting strongly on being present when Fraklin Roosevelt, jr., an oarsman on the Harvard freshman crew, rows in the Yale-Harvard regatta on June 20 at New London, Conn. There he also is expected to embark for his Pacific voyage on the cruiser Houston, which is now being conditioned at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Both Man and Dog Have Trouble.

When Uncle Joe left Mr. Man's house, he was sure enough mad.

Just to think that his dog had taken up with some strange dog, and gone away for a whole night and day, leaving his things there without anybody to look after them, and that Blackie Bear had come and done all these things while his dog was gone!

And then for Howler to tell him such a story about fighting the bears and coons and other animals!

Oh, it was too awful, and he was going to beat Howler most to death, and after this he would keep him chained so he couldn't leave the yard.

He was saying all these things out loud to himself as he went most running on his way back home, and Jay Bird was flying along listening to him. He had heard enough to know what was going to happen to Howler, and he spread his wings and hurried on to tell him before Uncle Joe got home.

Lying in Bed.

He fond Howler lying in his bed, and a big soup bowl that had been licked clean.

Aunt Judy was in the kitchen, but the door was shut, and Jay Bird whispered to Howler what Uncle Joe had said and was doing and told him to be ready to get away when the door was opened.

Then Howler began to whine and whimper terribly, and he though Aunt Judy would come and open the door and let him out.

But when she came out she just patted him on the head and said: "Poor doggie. I know it hurts. I guess those rascals did nearly kill you. But just stay in bed for a few days and you will be all right."

By this time she saw Uncle Joe coming with a great long switch that he had cut out in the woods, and he was trimming all the limbs off of it, and was coming awfully fast.

"What are you going to do?" asked Aunt Judy, when she saw the long whip.

"Just open that lattice door," said Uncle Joe, "and I'll show you what I am going to do."

She opened the door, and as Uncle Joe started in Howler started out. Uncle Joe was standing on the doorstep when Howler came through the door.

Howler Escapes.

He raised his big whip and came down with all his might on Howler's back, just as Howler jumped between his legs and threw him sprawling on the steps. It certainly was a hard lick that Howler got, but he didn't get but one and Uncle Joe's fall was just as bad, for he struck his head on the step and the lick raised a knot that was as big as a goose egg in a few minutes.

Howler didn't waste any time getting out of the yard.

When he jumped over the fence, Jay Bird was just ahead and said, "Follow me," and flew off toward Blackie's house.

Hound Dog had been expecting Howler to have trouble, and so he wasn't a bit surprised when he saw him and Jay Bird hurrying up to the house.

Howler was all out of breath; but he soon got rested enough to tell Hound Dog all about what Uncle Joe had done to him.

"Well," said Hound Dog, "we will charge it to him for a little while, and we will ask Blackie how he wants it paid."

Then after they had their supper they went to bed.

Mother Earth's Fever Puzzles Scientists as Mercury Rises globe over, especially in the United States, have been higher than those Old Mother Earth and her family of nations, particularly her strapping son, Uncle Sam, have a fever.

All the king's horses, tank corps, light artillery and dragoons seem unable to stop it. Scientists are perplexed mildly at results of a survey which indicated that, during the past decade, temperatures the over similar periods as long as such records have been kept.

The survey, released by the Smithsonian Institution, covers the period from 1921 to 1930. The temperature balance accumulated by the United States exceeded the less definite balance accumulated by Europe.

Nearly every station in the Nation from which H. Helm Clayton, editor of the World Weather Records, obtained data showed a higher mean average temperature for the decade than the mean average temperature for previous years in which observations were made.

In Washington the mean increase was an entire degree.

Records were kept here for 100 years prior to the recent survey. During the era of the snuff box, the hoop skirt, the balloon bathing suit and the duelling sword, extending as far back as 1821, Washington's mean temperature was 54.9 degrees. From 1921 until 1930 this rose to 55.9 degrees.

Numerous cities in the West surpassed the Capital in temperature jumps for the decade. These include Bismark, N. Dak., which gained two degrees, and Pheonix, Ariz., and North Platte and Omaha, Nebr.

"Why?" scientists ask each other. Thus far they have not made an answer.

Europe has been warmer during the decade, although the higher mean has not been found so consistently. At some stations there even was a slight decline.

$1,200 Stolen In D. C. Holdup

Collector Says Two in Cab Got Money Near T Street Bridge.

A collector for the Hot Shoppes, Inc., was held up and robbed of $1,200 yesterday as he was on his collection route on Brentwood road northeast, near the T Street Bridge.

Merville A. Hustler, of 1453 Ogden street northwest, told police his truck was forced to the curb by a taxicab. Two armed white men pointed guns at him.

"Hand it over," one of them said.

They took a wooden box, containing the collections for the day, and stole $35 from Hustler's pockets. To prevent pursuit they took the keys to the truck.

One of the hold-up men remained in the taxicab. He was described as 35 years old, 5 feet 6 inches in height and weighing 135 pounds. The other was described as 35 years old, 5 feet 8 inches in height, weighing 165 pounds, and wearing dark clothes and a straw hat.

Princess May Join Hutton's Hunting Trip

London, June 3 (AP).—Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani remained in seclusion at her hotel today, presumably trying to decide whether to accompany her father, Franklyn L. Hutton, on a shooting expedition to Austria.

She was with her husband, Prince Alexis Mdivani, and all indications were that harmony prevails in the family circle. It was reported she continues her recovery from an indisposition being referred to here as a "$1,000,000 stomach ache."

Soviets Make Life Hard For 'Riders of the Rods'

Moscow, June 3 (AP).—Hoboes, it was revealed today, are even more unwelcome on the railways of Soviet Russia than in the United States. The Communist government is seeking to abolish railroad hooliganism.

Damage to tracks and railway cars by hoboes, reported from many portions of the country, has brought an order to imprison for six months all persons caught stealing rides on trains. Vagrants who damage railway property may be imprisoned for three years.

Manhattan's exclusive Sanitizing Process thoroughly cleans and sterilizes Pillows

Science has proved that most Pillows contain dust, dirt, filth, germs from colds and sickness

IT'S A FACT. Soiled pillows are a health menace. For science has proved that soiled pillows, containing dust, dirt, perspiration oils, are ideal breeding places for the germs of colds and other sickness.

Have you thought about your pillows? Are they clean, free from germs, inside and out? Probably not, if they're like the average pillow which has been used any length of time. Ordinary washing, cleaning and airing cannot remove these menaces to your health.

Have your pillows sanitized by Manhattan! It takes the Sanitizing Process to thoroughly clean the feathers and ticking—to remove the dust, dirt and foreign substances—to make the pillows soft, fluffy, just like new.

And it takes the scientific live steam sterilizing which is part of the Sanitizing Process to destroy live germs.

Manhattan's Sanitizing Process is thorough and complete, yet it costs only 60¢ for each pillow. Each of the six steps illustrated on the right is necessary. That is why hospitals send us their pillows for Sanitizing. Here is real proof that soiled pillows are a serious health menace.

Why risk your health another night on soiled, dust and germ-laden pillows? Have them Sanitized! Hand them to the Manhattan Laundryman—or phone Decatur 1120—TODAY.

Remember that ONLY Manhattan can furnish this new, Patented Pillow Sanitizing in Washington and vicinity.

THE SIX IMPORTANT SANITIZING STEPS

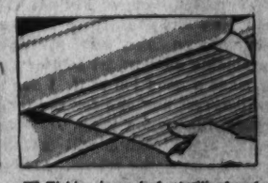
1 The feathers are removed from the ticking. Each pillow is handled individually. No feathers from another pillow can be mixed with yours.

4 Feathers are next dried by intense heat, sufficient to kill germs—and thoroughly fluffed. Additional feathers can be added at low cost if necessary.

2 All foreign matter is scientifically removed. Feathers beaten with steel paddles which crush all quills. Dust removed by vacuum cleaning.



5 Ticking is washed, sterilized and ironed separately. New ticking is furnished at moderate cost if necessary. Minor repairs are made free.

3 Feathers are then throughly sterilized with live, super-heated steam at high temperature.

6 Feathers are restored, and your pillow is returned to you, cleaner, softer, downier than most new pillows.

An Obligation Of Honor.

It will be most unfortunate if Congressional leaders allow the Wheeler-Howard bill to be caught in the last-minute jam of the present session.

The measure has the approval of nearly all organizations interested in the welfare of the American Indian, whose status in relation to the Government it seeks to improve. It has been amended to meet the objections advanced by informed critics and proponents of the legislation have made sizable concessions in the hope that at least the groundwork for reform might be laid in the present session.

There is no partisan consideration about the bill. Republicans and Democrats alike have entered into framing a measure which has the fulfillment of a National trust as its sole purpose. House and Senate committees have reported it favorably and there has been no indication that its passage would be more than a formality. The President has already indicated his approval and asked for its passage. In short, there is no valid reason why a bill which has such wide support should be laid aside because steamroller tactics are being invoked to flatten the opposition to other really controversial measures.

The Wheeler-Howard bill would go far toward discharging an obligation of honor and restitution toward a conquered people for whom we have assumed an inescapable guardianship. Its first step would be to reform the system under which the red men have been deprived of much of their lands. Its second would be to give them that measure of self-rule without which the remaining fragments of their civilization can not be preserved. These objectives are sufficient in themselves to warrant early action.

Gov. James Rolph, Jr.

San Franciscans called him, lovingly, "Sunny Jim." Ever since the terrible earthquake of 1906, when he did yeoman service for the stricken city, he was the idol of the electorate. Five times they sent him to City Hall as their mayor; 20 years he was boss of the Golden Gate. Then his State, from turbulent Imperial Valley to San Pedro, chose him Governor. He was, in all these 23 years of public service, one of the most picturesque characters in American politics. As an administrator he was capable, as a detector of popular opinion he was in a class by himself. He was "Sunny Jim," who could order out a brass band to meet his friend Jimmy Walker of New York and who could, against vehement protests, keep Tom Mooney in jail.

He made and lost a fortune in shipping, and made it again. He was a hard-headed business man, with some of the instincts of a gambler. He loved a political fight, and capitalized upon the fact that his birthplace was the Mission district. Garbed in his tall boots and guarded in his office by a cigar store Indian, he was a Colossus in the California political arena. Nationally he became known because he was, in many ways, as romantic and rampageous as the history of his native State. As Governor, the reformers tried to "get" him; a threatened senatorial investigation, however, was never held. In a material way, his career was crowned by the building of the 8¼-mile bridge across Oakland Bay, for which he had fought throughout all his years as mayor.

Last year there was a lynching in his State. Two men, accused but not convicted of kidnaping and murdering Brooke Hart, were hung by an angry mob. To the dismay of law-abiding citizens, he said of the mob, "They made a good job of it. I don't think they will arrest any one for the lynchings. If they do, I'll pardon them."

"Sunny Jim's" death will not remove those words from the record. Always fond of the grand gesture and the spicy speech, his last and best known utterance becomes his epitaph at the end of a dynamic, colorful career.

At Last.

Government officials stationed abroad are at last to receive extra compensation for the losses suffered through depreciation of the dollar. When it is realized that the dollar is now worth less than 60 per cent of its original parity and has been heavily depreciated for nearly a year, the delay in making the necessary adjustments seems unconscionable.

Of course the degree of hardship suffered has varied greatly from country to country. Until February 1 gold shipments were made to countries still on the gold standard in order to allow for necessary adjustments in wages and salaries. Nevertheless, thousands of Government employes have been forced to borrow to cover bare living expenses, homes have been broken up, and the prestige of the service has suffered in the eyes of foreigners.

It is asking the impossible to suggest that damages as well as compensation should be paid to the unfortunate individuals who have been deprived temporarily of a large percentage of their incomes by an arbitrary change in the gold value of the dollar. But it is not asking too much to suggest that if further devaluation should occur, consideration be given in advance to the effect of such action upon civil servants receiving payment in depreciated dollars and compelled to make payments in foreign currencies of stable purchasing power.

The Textile Settlement.

The threatened strike of cotton textile workers to force the NRA to rescind the 25 per cent curtailment order has been averted by an agreement designed to aid the employes in collective bargaining. An accredited representative of the workers is to be appointed to the Labor Advisory Board, and another will become labor adviser to the Government members of the Cotton Textile Code Authority. The Industrial Relations Board which has been established for the industry is to have its membership increased by the addition of one representative of the employers and one of the employes. The Administrator also agrees to urge upon the industry "such definition and amendment of the Industrial Relations Board as would accord with the President's formula in the automobile settlement." In short, the settlement relates exclusively to questions affecting union representation and methods of handling grievances, although the trouble ostensibly arose over the demands of the United Textile Workers for increases in pay to offset losses of working time.

These demands, which would have involved an increase of 33 1/3 per cent in hourly wage rates, have been rejected decisively. After stating that "no such violent increase can be considered at the present time," Gen. Johnson points out that the advance in the price of cotton textiles has already been the cause of consumer complaints. Raw cotton costs, including the processing tax, have risen 150 per cent, and labor costs under the code have increased 70 per cent. Inevitably, selling prices of cotton goods have risen rapidly, and consumer resistance has developed.

In recent months unsold stocks of cotton goods have been piling up, and with the summer seasonal dullness in prospect, curtailment of operations is inevitable. Consequently, if the strike had materialized, many mills would, no doubt, have welcomed a forced suspension of operations. In face of this situation, demands for a sharp increase in wage rates are an economic absurdity, although they appear to have had some effect as a means of securing other concessions desired by spokesmen for labor.

The cotton textile industry has cooperated in the program of raising wage rates and spreading employment by reducing working hours, but there is obviously a limit beyond which such policies can not be carried. That limit has plainly been reached if not overstepped. So long as industries are owned privately and operated for profit, pay rolls necessarily vary with changes in demand for the product. If wages should be regarded as a fixed sum to be paid whether productive activity is high or low, efforts to reduce output and costs in line with market demands at profitable prices would become hopeless. Yet that, in substance, is what the representatives of the United Textile Workers have been demanding, and it was to secure such impossible concessions that they threatened to call a strike.

Gold And The Franc.

Since March the Bank of France has added over 3,500,000,000 francs to its gold reserves. The bank has more than recovered the losses of gold that occurred after our dollar devaluation, and again after the Paris riots. Last week a reduction in the discount rate to 2½ per cent was announced, indicating that confidence in the stability of the currency has been restored. The decision to lower the discount rate is especially significant in view of the decline in the dollar-franc exchange rate to a point at which shipments of gold to this country have become profitable.

If the Bank of France desired to attract more gold, or felt fearful of losing it, the normal procedure would be to advance instead of to lower the discount rate. However, neither additions to gold reserves nor subtractions are in themselves matters of great moment, in view of the immense amounts of gold held by the Bank of France. Its gold holdings on May 25, for instance, were in excess of 77,000,000,000 francs, contrasted with less than 29,000,000,000 francs in June, 1928, when the currency was stabilized.

The anxiety aroused by the recent heavy gold losses, as well as the satisfaction caused by the subsequent gold gains, is due to the fact that these movements reflect changes in public opinion concerning the outlook for the franc. The loss of gold to the United States, due to dollar devaluation, would not have caused alarm had it not been for the accompanying flight of capital frightened by French domestic disturbances and the hoarding of gold by French citizens. Lack of confidence in the ability of the government to curb political disorders and belief that no coalition would be strong enough to force acceptance of fiscal reforms were the underlying reasons for distrusting the currency.

The successful efforts of the government of national union in putting through a severe retrenchment program is now restoring confidence. Capital that had been frightened away, as well as hidden domestic gold, is returning. It is for these reasons that the current gold accessions are viewed with such legitimate satisfaction in Paris. The outstanding problem in France today is political, and the fate of the franc is closely related to the outcome of the struggle to achieve a balanced budget and improve the domestic business situation without resort to further devaluation of the currency. Downward readjustments of prices in countries on the gold standard are required to bring them into line with the lower level of world prices resulting from widespread currency depreciation. And the process of accommodation will undoubtedly be difficult.

For the time being, at least, the position of the franc is a reflection of an improved public morale. Psychological factors played a large part in creating the demoralization which prevailed during the early months of this year, and they have been an important element in restoring shattered confidence. The response of the franc to such intangible influences is more significant than the material gains or losses of gold by a country that has much more of that metal than it needs to support its monetary and credit structure. The moral is one which our Administration, lacking the political courage with which the French are seeking to set their house in order, would do well to contemplate.

Constructive Criticism.

Timely words of caution and advice are coming from an increasing number of Senators. A few months ago members of that body were voting grimly for recovery measures and holding their own counsel. Clouds of depression overhung Congress with a tendency to silence opposition to New Deal measures, regardless of how far they might depart from American political traditions or sound legislative practice. This does not mean that the best minds in the Senate had ceased to think, but that thoughts were concealed and fears were guarded from the public. Now a considerable number of statesmen who rise above partisan politics are beginning to speak their apprehensions concerning some aspects of the recovery program.

Emergency bills—some of them of questionable character—are still being passed. But men of independent judgment on Capitol Hill are beginning to challenge measures that carry a threat to private property, individual initiative and political liberty. Their combined judgment and courage are certain to have a salutary influence upon the course of the Nation in the difficult period which still confronts us.

Through his interview with a representative of The Post Senator Bailey has joined that group of Senators who are trying to apply the brakes to haphazard experimentation. "Empires and republics do not fall by force," he says, "they fall by disintegration, and they die in the hands of men who do not know they are dying. Their destroyer is not the assassin, not the deliberate man with a stiletto who strikes in the night, but the man who does not think on the meaning of his acts or the import of the legislation which he espouses."

The Senator from North Carolina presents a cogent argument against the substitution of newfangled "isms" for principles and institutions that have been tested by experience. Like Senators Glass and Byrd, he is grasping at the fundamental issues while men of less foresight clamor for flimsy expedients. In some instances these men are openly opposed to theories which guide the Administration. Such opposition is not actuated by any hostility toward the President or by any feeling of disloyalty toward the Democratic Party. Rather it is an attempt to keep the party of which they are lifelong members on a solid foundation. No one can deny that in thus serving their party, in accordance with their sincere convictions, they are also helping the public to assume a more thoughtful and objective attitude toward the course of National events.

A Salutary Precedent.

Maryland officials who came to Washington to lay their relief problem upon the doorstep of the FERA made an unpleasant discovery. The Federal Relief Administration expects Maryland to share the burden of supporting the unemployed in that State on a 50-50 basis. Congress has been generous, even reckless, in opening the Federal Treasury to the States for relief purposes. But Federal officials are not yet ready to assume this entire burden.

The manner in which Maryland's officials sought to shift their responsibility upon the FERA is typical of the current era. They had worked out no specific plan. With naive confidence that the FERA would step into the breach and save Maryland from the results of its own negligence, they simply journeyed to Washington to present their case to Administrator Hopkins. That official deserves commendation for sending them back to Annapolis to raise at least $9,000,000 of the fund that will be needed for relief during the coming year.

Since the Congress authorized lavish outlays for relief, the tendency has been to shift this entire burden to the Federal Government. Mr. Hopkins recently calculated that expenditures during May would total $130,000,000, of which $110,000,000 would be furnished by Federal agencies. Quite a number of States are contributing nothing toward the relief of their destitute people. Many others are trying gradually to escape this essentially local responsibility. Emphatic ultimatums from the FERA to check this tendency are quite in order.

If Mr. Hopkins' decision in this case may be considered a precedent that will be followed in dealing with other States its significance will be far-reaching. It is probably true that some States are unable to take care of their own unemployed, but the great majority are as well equipped as the National Government to handle this problem. There is no sound reason why they should rely upon Federal doles.

Fairness demands, of course, that the rule which has been applied to Maryland be extended to all other States whose resources are ample to meet the emergency. Governors and legislatures that are concerned over the trend toward centralization of power in Washington can offer no reasonable complaint against such a program. States' rights and States' responsibilities go hand in hand. By forcing local officials to assume a more self-reliant attitude Mr. Hopkins is doing the States as well as Federal taxpayers a good turn.

Of course prosperity hasn't reached every one yet. We saw a man downtown yesterday trying to exchange a goldfish for a sardine.

We understand everything about Byrd's exploring the Antarctic regions except why he does it.

A good actress is a school teacher who can tell her pupils in a convincing manner that education pays.

Not in the Plan.

The Case of Judge Cobb.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to express my appreciation for the generous spirit indicated in the editorial on Judge James A. Cobb of the Municipal Court, which recently appeared in the columns of The Washington Post. I am particularly gratified because I feel that the editorial was possible because of the fair and liberal policy of the paper under its present management.

CAMPBELL C. JOHNSON,
Executive Secretary, Y. M. C. A.
Washington, May 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The people of Washington, regardless of race, owe The post a vote of thanks for the unusual interest it has shown in spreading before the public the merits of the Judge Cobb case. The case has been presented in its clearest outlines. The simple question is whether President Roosevelt will be guided by character, fitness and experience in making judicial appointments or whether political considerations are to form the determining factor. There can never arise a clearer case than this. President Roosevelt's well-wishers and admirers who, like myself, swear by his integrity of purpose and the genuineness of the New Deal, are not willing to believe that he will permit partizanship to invade the judiciary.

It is to be deeply deplored that a few members of the colored bar should feel offended at the merited praise which The Post heaped upon Judge Cobb. In stating that Judge Cobb possesses unique qualifications beyond the rest of his colored confreres at the bar in this jurisdiction, you were but indulging in a common-place fact known and acknowledged by all who will look the record squarely in the face. Equipped with a liberal education, years of successful private practice, nine years of experience in the Department of Justice, long professorship in a law school, climaxed by six years experience on the bench, Judge Cobb stands out in singular distinction among his colleagues. In this record, one would think, they would all take pride. There is undoubtedly good judicial material in the making, but Judge Cobb has already arrived.

I know that the political machinery can not be operated without patronage. Partisans and campaign workers normally expect reward when their party is victorious. But the judiciary should be spared such invasion. Where there is a clear field for a judicial appointment with two equally qualified applicants, the one belonging to the dominant party might expect to be preferred. But where the qualifications are palpably unequal, as in this instance, to change the seasoned and approved incumbent for the untried would be like swapping experience for an experiment.

The functions of the Municipal Court have no bearing upon the policies of the administration as might prove to be the case in higher judicial stations. This would make the replacement of Judge Cobb all the more inexcusable. With the exception of a few colored attorneys who feel their amour propre has been wounded by a casual comparison in The Post, the reappointment of Judge Cobb comes as near meeting with the unanimous approval of the community which he is to serve as any nomination that President Roosevelt will be called upon to make.

Pigeon Patronage.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It would be an act of public benefit if you would use your columns to call the attention of the Fourth Assistant Pigeon Chambermaid General to the filthy condition of Lafayette Square and the McPherson Statue.

Firefighters' Stand.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noticed in one of the evening papers that Private J. M. Jamieson was reelected president of the City Firefighters Association. Under his picture is the caption "Accomplishments of the Past Year Recalled." Among the accomplishments cited as one of the most notable we read "Appointment of a new Chief Engineer to fill the vacancy created by the death of Fire Chief George S. Watson."

I wish to contradict that statement. Referring to the newspapers of February 5, 6, and 7, we find that the City Firefighters Association not only opposed the appointment of Charles E. Schrom, the present chief engineer, but publicly announced through their attorney, Paul E. Jamieson, that Battalion Chief Charles W. Gill was their choice. Jamieson stated: "We are unqualifiedly opposed to the appointment of Schrom because he is of the old school. He would not be sympathetic toward the men, he was a member of the trial board under Watson, and lastly because he is too old."

I think that the statements of the reinstatement by Congress of the automatic increases and the so-called abandonment of enforcement of many repugnant and oppressive rules and regulations would not stand a lot of investigation either.

THE SERGEANT.

Consumer Asks Aid.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From the consumer's viewpoint, the time has surely come to put a quietus on those business organizations and politicians who for a few months have been trumpeting abroad their ambitious plans of price-fixing as a cure for the depression. When has defiance of the consumer's interest been so brazen?

The average citizen can have neither sympathy nor respect for those in business who imagine that they can not stand free, normal competition, who undertake to coerce their competitors, by denouncing as "chiselers" those who can sell at a lower price; and who would use the authority of the law to have such competitors arrested and jailed? Business men of this type would do better to get out of business and stay out. They are poor sports, violators of the Golden Rule, and unworthy of public support.

When the consumer is denied, as he now is denied, the opportunity of purchasing the very necessities of life in a free competitive market, when he pays an exorbitant tax on these necessities and receives no benefit whatever in return for said tax; when producers, even little farmers, are prevented by law from selling their own products except at an arbitrary price fixed by some board hundreds of miles away, when little business men are being tied hand and foot by Government red tape, hounded and threatened by deputies for this, inspectors for that, so that they have scarcely any time to attend to their business, when a poor dry-cleaner is actually fined and thrown into jail for pressing a pair of pants for 5 cents less than decreed by some law—when all of these things have actually come to pass, then fundamental, constitutional rights are surely being taken away from the citizens of this country.

Mothers' Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to an Associated Press dispatch in your columns a few days ago, Dr. Parran, New York State Commissioner of Health, draws attention to the death, in that State alone, of more than 17,000 women each year as a result of what he calls "our mismanagement of the child-bearing function."

Dr. Parran proposes that "the State provide money to pay the entire medical, hospital and nursing costs of child-bearing for every woman unable to provide the best care for herself."

But there is one important matter that I missed in Dr. Parran's plan for the benefit of mothers. There was no word to indicate that the mother business—child-bearing—could by any possibility be overdone, or that it might wisely be made subject to certain controls.

Any thoughtful person can readily find evidence that a large proportion of the deaths of women occurring as a result of "our mismanagement of the child-bearing function," are cases in which the child should not have been conceived. Also there is convincing evidence that a large part of the excess suffering and worries of mothers comes because too many children are conceived, or they have not been spaced with sufficient consideration for the health and strength of the mother, and with due reference to the financial and other resources of the family.

Many people shrink in doubt from the plan of plowing under fields of cotton plants and young corn. I am sure that the plowing under of so many mothers each year is both wicked and idiotic. It is the height of medical, social and religious mismanagement. The proper time to save most of these women is before conception has taken place.

On The TVA.

In appears from reports by Arthur E. Morgan, head of the TVA, and Secretary Dern, in charge of buying new National forest lands, as well as from Chattanooga news reports, that work in the Tennessee Valley region has progressed far enough to encourage definite hopes and controversies. Mr. Morgan told of his first ten months of administration. The TVA is utilizing the power of Muscle Shoals almost to capacity and building Norris and Joe Wheeler dams, expecting to need in the near future the added power they will furnish. The Electric Home and Farm Authority has been organized to furnish credit enabling families to buy domestic electric appliances. A concerted effort to transfer a large part of the farm population to new local industries, manufacturing chiefly for home consumption, has been inaugurated. Recently electro-ceramic and glue plants have been spoken of. Erosion, which has ruined one-quarter of the productive land of the region, and quickly fills up reservoirs, has been attacked. The ordinary practice in the hills is to burn over the land every year, thus preventing new timber growth. Timber is also regularly cut out in order to provide four or five crops of corn and as a consequence the slopes undergo too much erosion for further cultivation. Secretary Dern announced that the Government will immediately purchase 3,000,000 acres in the southern Appalachians to add to National forest domains and protect watersheds. Meanwhile cities of the district, led by Chattanooga, which hopes to become the center of the "Ruhr of America," are accusing the TVA of sending Southerners back to the land for good and acting generally in an uneconomic and unenlightened manner.

Exit The Orator

Postoffice, Monday.

WHEN you read things like the following in our cables from the Geneva disarmament gathering, you must remember that the arrival of new customs alters the meaning of old words:

"Norman H. Davis, United States Ambassador at Large, delivered his speech to attentive delegates • • •"

"Sir John Simon, for Great Britain, will deliver his speech tomorrow • • • "

There aren't any speeches at Geneva any more. There are only carefully prepared statements.

• • • •

Some commentators regret this. Most argue that it is a condition far better for weighed utterance and thoughtful hearing. Anyhow, the fact remains: At the League of Nations and its conferences, the speech, in the former sense of the term, is as out-moded as it is in Washington at the sittings of our Supreme Court. The sun of oratory set when French Aristide Briand left Geneva to go home and die.

• • • •

Briand was the ancient type, and he had as many followers in this as in other particulars. His home audiences called him "The Charmer" and "The Lullaby Singer;" his Geneva audiences called him both, and added "The Awakener." As we have elsewhere noted, his voice was a purling rill in his openings, at his climax a tidal wave. Every gesture was his, from the graceful embrace of a brother to the rending blow of the lion—every facial expression, from that of an old nurse, which he incredibly prevented from becoming absurd, to that of a snarling gorilla, into which he studiously tortured every element of terrorization.

And not alone studiously, either. Often his art would run away with itself—or, rather, his tongue would run away with him. We have known him, once he had spoken, send for the stenographic report and cut whole pages from the official record.

It was wonderful. It was effective. But there came times when it was dangerous • • •

However, Briand has gone—and the Briandesque speech went with him.

• • • •

Of course, to some extent, the non-Briandesque speech always existed at the league. A delegate's announcement of his Government's policy was never an affair of "wind and fury"—in its composition. Then, as now, he arrived with careful instructions in his brief case, and generally with the rough outline of what he was to say; a composite composed, in council, by himself and his colleagues at home. As matters moved at Geneva, he would report to his home superiors, by telegrgraph or telephone, and such conditions or deletions would be made as current events necessitated. On the night before the day set for his speech, its text would be given final form, all his staff assisting. Also, there were always some delegates who always delivered themselves in the modern manner.

However, there was the Briand tradition, just the same. No matter how careful the composition, delivery was frequently emotional, and impromptu speeches were prone to be especially so.

• • • •

But now!

Mr. Davis walks to the rostrum. Out of his breast-pocket he draws a folded script typed in large letters. He spreads it on a little reading stand.

Meanwhile, League messengers are handing mimeographed copies of that script to the official and journalistic audience. English-speaking persons get English versions, French translations go to the rest.

• • • •

Sir John Simon's method is similar. He too brings his script with him. He speaks like a lawyer arguing a brief, not before a jury, but before an appeals court concerned solely with the legal aspects of the case in hand. If he doesn't refer so often as Mr. Devis to the typed pages before him, that is simply because he is more at ease in Geneva and more nearly letter perfect.

• • • •

Among the French, Paul Boncour sometimes hooks fingers, though never too tenaciously, in the serevine of Briandism, but he is nowadays seldom sent to Geneva. Dapper and diplomatic Rene Massigli, France's usual armaments-negotiator, is the soul of brevity, the personification of the drily realistic.

Even the Italians and such Near-Easterners as the Turks are in the new mode; Smyrna-born Dr. Tewfik Fushdi Bey talks turkey—in French. Before the Japanese left the Armaments Conference, they talked long and heatedly only when they were showing themselves apt imitators of our own American Senators in the gentle art of filibustering.

Litvinoff? Well, he did, for years, regard what League gatherings he attended as microphones. Not bothered then with impressing delegates, he realized that, if he addressed them sensationally, he would "make the front pages" of the world's newspapers and, through those pages, address a vast, less cool-blooded audience. Here was his chance for propaganda; he took it. When he needs such propaganda again, he will doubtless try to revive that Briand oratory which he once practiced; just now he does happen to need the delegates. He seeks guarantees of peace on his country's long western frontier. And he is therefore relatively new-fashioned.

• • • •

So, in these days, there aren't any speeches at Geneva.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

The Editors and Congress.

WHEN some one in the Senate was cautioning his colleagues one day that if they did a certain thing the editors would tear their hides off, Senator Dave Reed arose and in his most plaintive way observed that whether they did or did not the editors would tear their hides off. In other words, in the opinion of the Senator, the editors were just a hide-tearing class.

BARGERON.

I didn't think much of the observation at the time because Reed always gives the impression that he has been wronged by the world. He is misunderstood, always has been—that is his attitude. Incidentally, I am glad he wasn't misunderstood in his recent primary fight with Gifford Pinchot.

• • • •

What I started out to say, however, was the big joke is on the editors insofar as this present Congress is concerned, or, rather, on those editors who kept demanding that Congress assert itself, that it quit being a rubber stamp. For months they kept this up. Has legislative government in this country failed? they asked. Are we to give up the Government of our forefathers?

Then all of a sudden Congress decided it would assert itself, that after all it was an integral part of the Government, that it represented the dear old people. Having decided to assert itself what did it do but up and pass the veterans' and silver legislation. It must have made the editors sorry they had opened their mouths.

• • • •

Here they were in a hole they had dug for themselves. For months the Congress had been going along enacting what the professors sent up. They seemed to be about as content up there on Capitol Hill as a bunch of well-fed job-holders could possibly be.

I am sure they were stirred out of this contentment by the agitation of the editors, that they became conscience-stricken and agreed that they were doing nothing for their money. Then becoming suddenly aroused from their lethargy and groping around for something to do to show they were still a legislative body, they stood on their full legislative dignity and passed the veterans' and silver bills. It almost broke the editors' hearts.

Yet there was little they could do. They couldn't reverse their campaign and urge the Congress, for goodness' sake, to keep quiet and follow the President. They could only wail about what kind of asserting Congress did when it asserted itself.

• • • •

Congress is always wrong, one way or the other. In the conservative Administration of Mr. Hoover the Administration-dominated House drew the plaudits of the conservative editors while the more independent Senate was invariably on the editorial pan. The House under Nick Longworth was just a rubber-stamp in appearance as the House is today.

There is, however, a very distinct difference in the two bodies, and one that bears upon the question of whether we are to have legislative Government or not. Under Nick's Speakership the same patronage whip was applied, the same disciplinary tactics enforced, as are the rule today. The rank and file of membership voted more or less blindly then as now.

• • • •

But Nick and his fellow leaders participated in the councils that determined the policies. They never threw their support behind measures to which they didn't subscribe. It was not a case of a professor sending them a bill with the demand: "Have the House pass this." They were present when the bills were first discussed. The President called them and said: "I have this idea, what do you think of it?" In other instances, they originated the ideas.

Great credit, I think, is due to the present Democratic leaders of both the House and Senate, insofar as getting through the work their Administration wants done is concerned. Particularly is this true of Joe Robinson, whose record is a sharp rebuke to those who said earlier that he would have to be given a judgeship so he could be replaced by a stronger man.

But they have had not the slightest part in the formulation of the laws they have pushed through. They have been simply employes of the Administration, in no wise copartners of it.

Teachers Asked To Dedicate Selves

200 Are Graduated From Farmville College.

Farmville, Va., June 3 (AP).—The education of today was the topic of the sermon delivered tonight in the college auditorium of State Teachers College here by Dr. Solon B. Cousins, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, of Richmond.

Outlining the needs of the modern man and woman who would help save the world of today, Dr. Cousins called on the more than 200 graduates to dedicate themselves to the supreme task of education.

Tomorrow the annual class day exercise will be held. Tuesday morning, Dr. Joseph J. Rives, pastor of Emory Methodist Church, Washington, D. C., will deliver the baccalaureate address. Dr. Joseph L. Jarman, president of the college, will present diplomas to the graduating classes, and the fifteenth commencement of the State Teachers College will be brought to a close.

Dollfuss, in Chancery, Quit Hitler for Il Duce

Little Chancellor, Caught Between Socialists and Nazis, Crushed the Former at Mussolini's Order to Barricade Italy Against Reich.

(Editor's Note: Following is the fifth of a series of ten articles on the puzzling European situation by Hamilton Fish Armstrong, who has just returned from a trip to the principal capitals. Mr. Armstrong deals extensively with the possibility of war abroad.)

V. DOLLFUSS, MUSSOLINI, HITLER

By Hamilton Fish Armstrong, Editor Foreign Affairs.

Early in 1934 it looked as though Hitler would have only to reach up and pluck the Austrian plum from above his head. And after the Austrian government's bloody action in Vienna in the second week in February the world's first impression was that by destroying his own moral prestige Chancellor Dollfuss had obligingly bent down the branch. Hitler would now be able to get what he wanted without provoking serious civil war in Austria and without giving neighboring states an excuse for intervention. It was expected that in order to hold his own Dollfuss would have to take Nazis into his Cabinet, after which he would find himself in the position Hugenberg and Von Papen had been in after they had accepted Hitler as an ally: in Austria, as in Germany, the Nazi fish would swallow the Nationalist whale.

The actual course of events has been somewhat different. The German Nazis were dispirited by Dollfuss' successful adoption of their own terroristic methods. The Austrian Nazis felt that for the moment the wind had been taken out of their sails, and though they profited from the dissolution of the Social Democratic party, the strongest force in Austria opposed by every principle and interest to the Nazi program, they found that they had to contend with an increasing dislike among Austrian Catholics for the news that was coming over the border about the treatment of the Catholic church in Bavaria.

Hitler, for his part, without abandoning his program, felt that for both domestic and foreign reasons he must slow down its execution. But he had the consolation of knowing that the Austrian Nazis were still well organized and devoted, and that Austria's status was artificial and therefore temporary. He thought he could safely wait for the plum to fall into his lap.

Meanwhile he must have felt it a gain that not only had the Austrian Republic ceased to exist, but that for all practical purposes independent Austria had ceased to exist also. Probably more Austrians are today conscious of having a separate national individuality than at any time since the war. But they are not masters of their own fate. Austria really has only two courses now open to her—to continue as a Fascist appendage to Italy, or to become a Nazi appendage to Germany while awaiting the proper moment for official unification (Danzig's present status).

A third course—the restoration and international guaranty of Austrian independence, and the establishment of good relations with all her neighbors on a basis of equality of interest and opportunity—might conceivably be opened to her presently. But whether or not this will happen does not, unfortunately, lie with her to say. Dollfuss has, indeed, one means left of making his wishes felt: he can threaten Italy that he will "go Nazi." It is a powerful weapon, and with it he counts on winning many commercial concessions from Rome. But he realizes that it is double-edged, that if once again he were known to be considering a purely German solution Berlin would seize the opportunity to give marching orders to the impatient Austrian Nazis.

Dollfuss' Hand Forced on Socialists by Mussolini.

The best explanation of why Dollfuss decided to destroy Austrian socialism, wipe out the constitution and republic he had sworn to defend, and accept Italian tutelage is that Mussolini and Mussolini's Austrian agents, the Heimwehr, forced his hand. If he did not accept Mussolini he had to accept Hitler. There were other reasons. He personally hated the Socialists. They had exposed him to rebuke from the powers by insisting on revealing the shipment of Italian arms into Hungary, by way of Austria (the Hirtenberg affair); their chief spokesman, Otto Bauer, had consistently treated him with intellectual contempt; their citadel in the capital city was a constant reminder that one day an election or a general strike or even an armed uprising might push him off the stage.

In his hatred of the Socialists, it is fair to say, Dollfuss was entirely true to the tenets of his own Christian Socialist party as conceived by his predecessor, Monsignor Seipel, who never forgot that socialism was an anti-Catholic force and that its program was always achieved at the expense of the Austrian elements which were the backbone of his church and his party. Still another ground for mistrusting the Socialists was that so long as there was a liberal regime in Germany, and especially just after the war, they had favored the Anschluss (union with Germany).

But he certainly had no cause to fear that tendency after the German Nazis had stamped out German socialism. The pro-German attitude of the Austrian Socialists had been theoretical and tactical, inspired partly by the ideals of 1848 and partly by the wish to hold some strong card with which they might exact concessions in financial negotiations with the powers (Seipel himself often used this card). Such motives were entirely different from the pan-German and militaristic ideals of those now pressing for union.

Dollfuss may have believed, too, what Seipel knew from his own experience was not the case—that the Socialist program was red. In plain fact, the Schutzbund, the Socialist force against which the government trained its guns on February 12, had born the brunt of the fighting to keep Vienna from going Communist after the war, and the arms which Dollfuss found in their possession had been handed out to them at that time. The Schutzbund, organized and armed as the bulwark of the Austrian State against extreme radicalism, only became illegal in the spring of 1933, by a decree which did not, however, outlaw the Fascist Heimwehr of the clerical guards, a proceeding which the Socialists quite correctly put down as preliminary to the forcible establishment of the reactionary forces in control of the State.

A really more justifiable criticism of the Austrian Socialists is to the opposite effect—that selfishly speaking they were not radical enough. This is much the same criticism that one of the German Social Democrats now in Prague made to the writer regarding his party's general policy in the post-war years; that they had been too good democrats and not sufficiently good Socialists. The scruples of Democrats! And the difficulty of combining socialistic and individualistic conceptions of life!

Persisted in Refusing Strong Natural Foes of Nazism.

While fighting the Nazis, Dollfuss continued to refuse offers of help from the strongest natural force in Austria opposed to Nazism in any shape or form. In September, 1933, he heard that General Vaugoin, Minister of Defense since 1921 and chairman of his own party, had been giving a sympathetic hearing to Socialist plans for joint action in case of a Nazi coup d'etat; Dollfuss promptly retired him to the unmilitary post of president of the Federal Railways. Repeatedly the Socialists suggested ways in which they might strengthen the hands of the government, asking only private assurance from Dollfuss that he intended to preserve the republic; repeatedly he turned them down, and pressed his campaign alike against them and against their common foes, the Nazis. Surreptitiously, meanwhile, he negotiated with Nazi emissaries as to terms of reconciliation in case this battle on two fronts got too hot for him.

Participating in these negotiations, as well as in separate discussions of their own, were representatives of the Heimwehr, the Fascist private army organized by Prince von Starhemberg largely with Italian support. Their course at this juncture must not be judged too severely. Mercenaries are not bound to be everlastingly faithful. The method which Italy had outlined for saving Austria from the claws of Hitler must have seemed to them, as to Dollfuss, on the verge of failure, and they naturally began looking about for a bridge to the enemy camp.

Suddenly Mussolini decided that something drastic must be done. He saw that he was on the verge of losing both Dollfuss and the Heimwehr. He also was becoming painfully conscious of the danger that the first fruits of his revisionist talk, designed to win the friendship of Germany, Hungary and Bulgaria by offering them the property of third parties, was likely to bring Germany to the Brenner and to the heights above Trieste—that is to say, to the frontiers of the South Tyrol and within sight of the blue waters of "Mare Nostrum." He saw that he must abandon the role of Germany's friend and benefactor. Caught unawares by the imminence of something which every journalist in Central Europe could long before have told him was likely to happen and warned that Dollfuss was about to accept partnership with the Nazis (in January the deal was almost made), the Italian dictator chose the lesser of two risks; he counseled Dollfuss to stake all at once on a knockout blow against the weaker of his opponents, the socialists, making use of the Heimwehr to set the scene for that operation, and he told him that Italy would support the enterprise even to the extent of military intervention if Germany interfered or if the socialist organization proved stronger than expected.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

SATURDAY the bottom of this page jumped up impetuously and did away with the second book I had on the docket. Both books are in the "Social Action" series (Norton, $1.75) edited by Dr. Alvin Johnson. The first, with which the following comparison was made, was Clark Foreman's "The New Internationalism."

• • • •

The trouble with making up an imaginary scene is not the dialogue but the mechanics. I was just about to suggest that Mrs. Francis Perkins, at some Cabinet session not long back, must have stayed behind to talk to teacher. But by protocol the President leaves the room first.

Anyway, at luncheon or tea, in the Green Room or Blue Room, how or where you will, Miss Perkins must have shyly remarked to her chief: "You know, I'm writing a book too!"

"Ah!" no doubt the President boomed. "Splendid!"

"Well, you know about such things," she most likely went on. "I was wondering if you could tell me the name and address of a good publisher. Do you suppose they really read the manuscripts sent them?"

Then the Rooseveltian head must have bent forward with earnest advices.

• • • •

At least I imagine it that way, for Miss Perkins' "People at Work" (John Day, $2.50) now appears from the house which published the President's "On Our Way" a few weeks back.

It is a chatty, informal book, written to be read rather than studied. I hope I may be pardoned in suspecting the hand of a ghost-writer—Secretarial style doesn't usually convince one as charming. But I mean this as a compliment. I welcome any assertion of Miss Perkins' handiwork.

There is probably no numbering the people who have come to Miss Perkins and told her their troubles. As she remarks, "The Department of Labor is the one great department of the Government all the activities of which deal in human welfare." And if you know of a less definable and more arguable subject than human welfare I should like to be told.

To her credit, perhaps, Miss Perkins does not push very far toward definition. She reports the gradual growth in this country of a feeling for the worker as a human being—the Triangle factory fire in New York, 1911, which killed 147 workers resulted but in a dramatic peak in this rising curve. She tells dozens of first-hand conversations with workers which show their side of it. She quotes the most encouraging remarks from Southern mill-workers who are benefiting under the cotton code. Yet it all comes out in the end to the kind of glorious but somewhat ethereal generalization of which this is a sample: "We (the Department) have come to a point of view under the discipline of American opinion and feeling where we demand an industrial life good in human terms as well as in terms of complicated economic formulae."

In other words, one is inclined to say to this book—"True, O Queen, live forever! But what then?"

• • • •

Perhaps definite and detailed explanation of these fine words is beyond the comprehension of most of us. But that, as Prof. Rogers very strongly notes in his book "is no reason why an attempt should not be made to explain the problems. It is simply a reason why greater attention should be paid to the way in which the problems are explained and why the explanation should be planned and continuous rather than thoughtless and sporadic."

But he was attacking the apparent policy of the Administration rather than a considerable exception such as Miss Perkins' book.

Nations That Have Least Take Best Care of It

By Robert Quillen

Every good citizen must at times long for the powers of a monarch. As a monarch with unlimited powers he could do the things that are now left undone, and for want of which this nation faces ultimate and inevitable decay.

Decay will be slow in coming, but its coming is certain unless heroic measures are undertaken to prevent it.

Do you know the source and foundation of America's wealth and greatness? It is that great basin called the Mississippi Valley—a vast empire extending from the western slope of the Alleghenies to the eastern slope of the Rockies. Without it—with only the two coastal regions joined together to form a nation—America would be a second-class power, unable to feed her people without imports of grain. It is the greatest and richest plain on earth, and the wealth it produces each year is greater than all the wealth in our banks.

Is the destruction of such an empire possible? It is not only possible but as certain as death and taxes if the present methods of bleeding the land is continued.

When America was the happy hunting ground of Indians, the rich soil formed by the chemistry of the ages was protected and held in place by forest trees and shrubs and the grasses of the prairie. Neither torrential rains nor cyclonical winds could carry it away.

When the forests were cut down and the grassland brought under the plow, good soil seemed so immeasurably abundant that no effort was made to protect it. And every rain that fell made creeks and rivers black with the soil of ravished fields. Down the muddy Mississippi coursed the life blood of a nation.

Now the winds take up the work of destruction. Much plowing and exposure to rain and sun have broken up the soil particles as the mill grinds wheat to flour. And the winds pick up the dust and carry it away, and the heavier particles of sand in which there is no life are harried along the ground until they meet an obstruction and form drifts to cover and ruin land that was still productive.

In some places the topsoil has been blown away to a depth of 6 inches. Areas larger than France have been robbed of half their richness. And soon—not in our time, but soon—the richest of empires will be a desert and our heritage will have gone the way of the buffalo.

The Pulitzer Prize Play.

If Mr. Pulitzer could revisit the glimpses of the moon, he would be delighted with the results of his generosity. Every year the Pulitzer literary prizes command increasing attention; and one of the best features is the acrimonious discussion they arouse. It is a splendid thing to see Americans engaged in a violent debate over a question of art.

The jury of three who makes their report have only the powers of recommendation; the final decision is left with the School of Journalism in Columbia University. More than once has the vote of the committee been reversed. This year, the committee, consisting of Prof. Walter Prichard Eaton, of the School of Drama at Yale University; Clayton Hamilton, dramatic critic, and Austin Strong, playwright, unanimously recommended "Mary of Scotland," by Maxwell Anderson, who won the prize last year with "Both Your Houses." This recommendation was not accepted; the Pulitzer Prize was awarded to "Men in White," by Sidney Kingsley. Both of these plays have been enormously successful; they went on the stage last autumn and in the spring they are still playing to packed houses.

I am myself extremely glad that the prize was awarded to "Men in White," for I firmly believe it is the best play for a remarkably good season. "Mary of Scotland" is beatifully written, dramatically exciting and superbly played by Helen Hayes, Helen Menken and Philip Merivale. "Men in White" is absolutely original, has more to tell audiences, and, of course, is much closer to the life of our times. And, of all individuals, the surgeon is today the most dramtic personage.

The author, Sidney Kingsley, is a young man, still under 30. He was born in 1907 in New York City, was graduated from Cornell University in 1928, acted in a stock company at the Tremont Theater, in the Bronx, and later had a small part in that thrilling melodrama, "Subway Express."

"Men in White" is not the only play he has written, but it is the first to reach the Broadway stage. Clyde Fitch used to say that it took a man of talent to write a play, but a man of genius to get it on the boards. It opened at the Broadhurst, Theater, September 26, 1933. It was presented by that admirable organization known as the Group Theater.

The play had to overcome a natural reluctance to see it, on the part of an immense number of people, which makes its success all the more gratifying. When they were told that all the scenes were laid in a hospital and that one entire scene was a major operation, many decided they would not attend. But those who came in trepidation had their fears overcome by the beauty and truth of the drama.

Brain-Teasing Game Offers Great Variety

Are You Sure You Know "What Makes a Pair of Boots?"

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IF there's a sudden epidemic of brain fever in Washington, physicians can trace it source to the new game in an F street store. It marks a point in game evolution — from crosswords, to jigsaws, to the four hundred. Eight books and a small spinner are apt to give the dumbbell a new lease on life.

The hands of the spinner turn to indicate which question from which book it's going to be your lot to answer. It might be anywhere from 1 to 50 in "Love and Marriage," "American History," "Etiquette," "Famous Sayings," "Foods and Cooking," "Riddles," "Spelling" or "World Events." You might be confronted with "In what country does the honeymoon precede the wedding ceremony?" or "During what great national event did the song 'There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight' originate?"

Of course there are a few stickers like, "Where can happiness be found?" Answer: In the dictionary. Or, "What makes a pair of boots?" Answer: Two boots. But the majority of questions take one back to the good old days of exams when all the rust on the brain cells was sadly in evidence.

The Four Hundred should prove a boon to hostesses when the "life of the party" is out of town. It's one of those things that any number can play, any time, and anywhere. And as some one facetiously remarked, "It's a sugar-coated pill of learning!"

Convenient for Beach Duds.

It will be easy to pack up your beach duds in a canvas bag and smile, ditto, ditto. For so far these are the smartest at the smallest cost that have appeared on the counter of a local shop.

Like sporty luggage with dapper side straps, these two have the colored lines down the center, left and right. A rubber lining makes it safe for damp suits, or leaky flasks, and the plain tan or blue covers suit them for service.

• • • •

Leak-Proof Powder Can.

A blase shopper tarried a moment in front of a cosmetics counter and cast her eyes over the usual lipsticks, rouges and powders on display. "Why don't you get something new?" she asked the salesgirl.

"I have something new," the young woman replied, "a box of talcum powder."

"Talcum powder! There's nothing new in that," the customer told her.

"But this is new," the girl insisted, holding out a vividly colored Mexican box for her approval. The shopper looked at it, turned it up and tried vainly to sprinkle a little on her hand. "It doesn't work," she said. Turning around she called to a friend and bade her come see the new powder that wouldn't pour out of its box. Meantime the salesgirl had pressed the tricky top button. The shopper picked it up to show her friend and gave it a vehement shaking. Clouds of powder came sifting forth, and strewed itself generously over the floor and frocks of both women.

Some people thought it was funny. At any rate it served as a bolt of fine advertising for a new talcum with a leak-proof top.

Baby Shark Skins.

Baby sharks accustomed to romp in Southern waters are playing hide and seek with fishermen there these days, according to the proprietor of a Connecticut avenue shop. He has just received a batch of billfolds, key cases and cigarette cases made from baby shark skin, and he says they're selling like wildfire to gentlemen who know what's what in dress.

It's impossible to see them without noticing their fine grain (and thereby fine grade), or to feel them without remarking on the softness and silkiness of texture.

Keeps Candies Separated.

The answer to how to serve three kinds of candy in one dish and keep them from getting mixed together is just another question solved by an F street shop. In the rear of the store is a little department given over to gift suggestions, and novelties of all kinds. Here is a small chrome candy dish with an inner glass compartment divided into three sections. A chrome top comes with it to keep the candy fresh till the time it's served.

Here is a moderately priced, handy gadget to take along for the next June wedding shower.

• • • •

Sun Suits for Children.

There's no use straining the budget to buy the kiddies' sun suits so long as they're priced at 69 cents in a downtown department store.

Wise parents realize the futility of heavy investments for the play wardrobe. They want attractive little garments that will feel at home in the wash tub.

Right now they have an exceptional opportunity in the pinafores, rompers and little fabric suits. Not one of them that doesn't look as though it had been painstakingly designed. They're beautifully finished, hand embroidered, appliqued and trimmed in a number of fascinating ways.

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

John Stark—Molly Page

PAUL REVERE had a dramatic ride but Molly Stark's were grimmer. During tense Revolutionary days she rode patrol around the countryside adjacent to the little New Hampshire town in which she lived. Under the instructions of her soldier husband, Gen. John Stark, she watched the enemy. At their approach she would saddle up and gallop through the country on missions of warning. Her romance wasn't all a war-time one, though. There were happy years of peace when the British returned home.

John Stark of a Family Willing to Fight for Freedom.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

WE hear a great deal in American history about the historic ride of Paul Revere, telling the colonists of the advance of the British in "1775" upon their homes and households.

Less is known, however, of similar little journeys on horseback by Molly Stark, one of the heroines of the Revolution, whose memory has been preserved to us by contemporaneous historians admirers of the exploits of this woman.

Back of the story of Molly Stark, however, are not only heroic deeds but the grace of a memorable romance as well.

Was Model of Felicity.

Her romance with John Stark was an oft-repeated tale of colonial days and a model of marital felicity. The very words "John Stark" bring to the minds of those familiar with their American history a vision of Bunker Hill, the ramparts of Trenton and the battle of Bennington, all big moments in the story of the American Revolution.

John Stark came of a line not unacquainted with the word "Liberty." In Scotland his family were independent thinkers, alert to obtain and protect their freedom with their last ounce of heroic blood. This valiant strain was not confined to the men of the clan, however. The women possessed their own share of it. A certain Helen Stark is recorded in Fox's Book of Martyrs under date of 1544, as being the first woman martyr of Scotland. Naturally the Starks were not paricular as to whether or not it was political or religious freedom for which they were fighting and often mixed the two issues without hesitation.

From this stern Covenanter stock John Stark was descended. His immediate progenitors, Archibald and Eleanor Stark, set out for the New World and the Scotch-Irish colony established in what is now New Hampshire. In those colonial days a sea voyage from England or Scotland was no light matter. The vessels were frail and at the mercy of every wind and wave, and, in addition, disease stalked on the decks of the crude ships ready to claim its victims at will.

Had Four Sons.

But these dangers were overcome and the Starks settled on the banks of the Merrimac, "the haven where they would be"—and unpacked their scanty Lares and Penates. The settlement was called Londonderry and there their four sons, William, Samuel, John (August 28, 1728) and Archibald were born.

The perils of the woods and the ever lurking Indian foe were daily affairs to little John as he grew into manhood on his father's New Hampshire farm. He learned not to fear, to shoot straight, and to look the whole world in the eye. Good training this, for a lad who later was to withstand the British line to his face.

When the Seven Years War with the French and the Indians was in progress John Stark joined the British army and quickly rose to the rank of captain. The colonial belles cast languishing glances on the dashing frontier officer—but all in vain. He could echo the words of Col. Lovelace:

To Lucasta, on Going to the Wars.

Tell me not, Sweet, I am unkind
That from the nunnery
Of thy chaste breast and quiet mind
To war and arms I fly.

True, a new mistress now I chase,
The first foe in the field;
And with a stronger faith embrace
A sword, a horse, a shield.

Yet this inconstancy is such
As you too shall adore;
I could not love thee, dear, so much
Loved I not Honour more.

Yet romance was just around the corner for him. For sweet Elizabeth Page, the daughter of Caleb Page, a captain of provincial militia, had now grown up. The two families were friendly, both being original grantees of Starkstown and little Elizabeth thought Capt. Stark a real Prince Charming in uniform.

On his furloughs home, Capt. John found plenty of opportunity and time in which to woo the sweet "Molly," as her friends called her, and under which name she has come down in history to the present day.

At any rate, we find the wedding bells ringing merrily on August 20, 1758, for Capt. Stark, of his majesty's Corps of American Rangers, and "Elizabeth, the daughter of Caleb Page, esquire."

The honeymoon was brief, indeed, for within a day Capt Stark had to return to the field of battle and Molly settled down to the usual fate of womankind the world around, to worry and wait for her soldier husband's return.

After the capitulation of Canada in 1760, the Starks set up belated housekeeping in Derryfield, N. H. Molly had no idle moments, with the upbringing of 11 children.

In Peace Until 1775.

So in peace the Stark family prospered until an April day in 1775, when the news of the Battle of Lexington was borne into the valley by swift courier. John Stark left his sawmills when he heard the news; gathered up his trusty gun and mounted his horse. Once more he was off to the "wars" and we can picture Molly with her little ones about her, white faced, but courageous, bidding farewell to the lover, the father and the husband.

Within a few days Capt. John Stark had recruited 13 companies in the vicinity and had been elected colonel of the regiment. When the day of Bunker Hill arrived the colonel was much surprised to see in a new recruit his eldest son, Caleb, a mere lad, who had followed his father off to war.

Nor was Molly Stark idle, either. Under her husband's instructions she rode patrol about the neighborhood, watched the British and when she saw the need rode into the country and aroused the countryside of the approach of the enemy.

Sought Victory or Death.

It was at the Battle of Bennington when Gen. Stark uttered the historic call to his men: "Yonder are the Hessians. Tonight the American flag floats over yonder hill or Molly Stark sleeps a widow."

And he took home to Molly, when peace came, a souvenir of the battle in the form of a brass cannon, known for a long time as "Cannon Molly Stark." The Continental Congress recognized the valor and military leadership of John Stark by granting him a commission as brigadier general.

Peace years passed swiftly in the old home place in New Hampshire and as age crept upon Gen. and Mrs. Stark the ties of the romance between them were bound closer together. Then came that melancholy day when Molly Stark's brave eyes closed forever on the things of earth and John Stark was indeed desolate.

He survived bonnie Molly by many years, dying when 94 years of age, full of honors and with the gratitude and respect of his State and the Nation he had helped to create. Without Molly, all earthly game and glory was but vain, however. To the day of his own death he never failed to mourn her loss and to name that August day, so far away then, on which they had been married as "the happiest and the greatest day of his life."

Molly, His Wife, Showed Equal Courage in Time of War.

National Tomato Week Calls to Mind the Many Attractive and Tasty Forms in Which It Can Be Utilized.

By Susan Mills.

THE tomato comes into its own. It came rolling into the markets at such a fast and luscious rate that those people who decide upon celebrations have taken it upon themselves to put the tomato in its proper place. So let's start today with a loud cheer for tomatoes, since this is National Tomato Week.

Tomatoes are enormously valuable in the making of salads because they blend or combine with other vegetables, cold meats, cheeses, sea food and fruits equally well.

Take stuffed tomatoes, for instance. They can be filled with any of the following salads: cabbage, celery, chicken, cucumber, scallops, sweetbreads or water cress. Or you may whip cream very stiff, add a little lemon juice, chopped cucumbers on walnuts and fill tomato shells with the mixture and garnish with chopped green pepper and chives.

Did you ever stuff tomatoes with a mixture of crushed pineapple and walnuts?

Tomato Bacon Salad.

Fry bacon until crisp, drain and crumble with a fork. Arrange tomato slices on lettuce, sprinkle with bacon crumbs. Add a dressing made with 8 tablespoons salad oil, 6 tablespoons lime juice, one-half teaspoon salt and one-quarter teaspoon paprica.

Following are some recipes using tomatoes as a vegetable course.

Broiled Tomatoes.

Dip 6 tomato slices in the following mixture: 1 tablespoon oil or butter, dash of pepper and salt, fine cornmeal or bread crumbs. Broil in butter, sprinkle with bits of butter and chopped parsley, and serve.

Devlied Tomatoes.

Broil tomatoes, slices cut one-half inch thick. Mix 3 hard-boiled egg yolks, mash smooth; one-quarter teaspoon each salt and paprica, 1 teaspoon each powdered sugar and mustard, 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Cook mixture in sauce pan until it boils, add 2 beaten eggs, stir until thick and pour over broiled tomato slices. Garnish with thin slices of hard-boiled egg white and serve.

Tomatoes, Farci.

6 large, firm tomatoes
1 cup mushrooms
½ cup chicken
1 tablespoon melted butter
½ cup cream
Salt and pepper

Cut tops from tomatoes, but do not peel, scoop out inside and drain. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Fill with mixture of mushrooms, chopped; chicken, butter, cream and seasoning. Cover with bread crumbs and bits of butter and bake about half an hour in moderate oven.

Culbertson on Bridge

The Revealing Double.

Even though a player feels quite certain that he can defeat a contract, it does not necessarily follow that it is a wise course to double for penalties. The Penalty Double frequently tells too much and suggests to the Declarer an unusual line of play which, without the Double, he would not have considered.

An example of how a very fine Bridge player took advantage of an adverse Penalty Double to fulfill a contract which no other player made, occurred in a Duplicate game at Greenwich, Conn. The holder of the South hand was Mr. Hugh S. Jackson, well known in New York Bridge circles as an expert player. The hand was:

West, Dealer
North and South vulnerable

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1♣
Pass	1NT	Pass	3♠
Pass	4♠	Pass	5◇
Pass	5♡	Pass	6♠
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Mr. Jackson's opening bid of one club was artificial—not the Vanderbilt Club bid, but a system designed to show the possession of certain varying numbers of tricks by bidding one club, one diamond, one heart, one spade or one notrump. It did not in any way necessarily guarantee a club suit, but did show quite a strong hand. The subsequent bid of three spades was a disclosure of additional strength, and North's Raise to four spades came as a matter of course. Mr. Jackson's bid of five diamonds was another artifical bid in the nature of a Slam try, and North's response of five hearts was also a cue-bid. The contract could have been reached just as readily by showing Aces in wholesale fashion, but when North and South had located all the Aces, the Slam bid followed as a matter of course in view of the high-card tricks in Mr. Jackson's hand and the sprinkling of honors held by North.

West really had a right to feel that he could double the contract safely for a penalty, holding as he did an apparently certain trick in hearts and almost beyond question a trick in trumps. No doubt, he would have defeated the contract had he been content to defeat it undoubled.

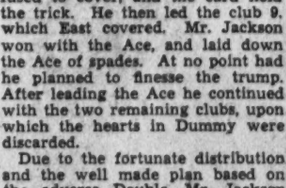
West's Opening lead was the heart King, which was won in Dummy with the Ace. When Mr. Jackson surveyed the Dummy he could see that he had only a remote chance to fulfill his contract and that if he were to do so he must be especially favored by the gods of distribution. That chance depended upon finding West with four trumps, as well as four clubs. East, for the success of Mr. Jackson's plan, must hold the club Jack.

Thus reasoning, Mr. Jackson led from Dummy the club Ten, East refused to cover, and the card held the trick. He then led the club 9, which East covered. Mr. Jackson won with the Ace, and laid down the Ace of spades. At no point had he planned to finesse the trump. After leading the Ace he continued with the two remaining clubs, upon which the hearts in Dummy were discarded.

Due to the fortunate distribution and the well made plan based on the adverse Double, Mr. Jackson lost but one trick, West cashing the trump King. The losing hearts in the Declarer's hand were ruffed in Dummy, and another contract had been fulfilled, thanks partly to a too revealing Double.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, Dealer
Both sides vulnerable



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Do You Know Who Is Guilty Of Murders?

Solutions for Talking Sparrow Mysteries Will Win Prizes.

WHO committed The Talking Sparrow Murders? No one knows but Darwin L. Teilhet, the author of the story of that name, which has been appearing serially in The Washington Post. The ending, as he wrote it, rests in a sealed envelope in a vault in The Post Building.

No instalments of the story appear in the paper today, tomorrow or Wednesday. This is to give contestants for $300 in prizes offered by The Post an opportunity to write their own solutions, submitting them before midnight Tuesday. The story will pick up in Thursday's Post where it left off yesterday.

Prizes to Be Given.

Solutions submitted by readers will be checked with that of the author, and prizes will be awarded on the basis of accuracy as compared with the denouement as the author conceived it.

Several murders were committed in the course of the story, yet only four of them need be accounted for in the solution. Who killed Kohlmann, the elder? Spalger? Taubek? The news vendor?

Answers should be in the form of a confession of the criminal, or criminals, if more than one was involved, and should reveal also the motive behind the crimes. To give a clear picture of the unraveling of the mystery, contestants also will want to give their ideas of when and how the murders were committed, who the mysterious La Roc was, and similar details.

500-Word Limit.

The confession should be limited to 500 words, and none of greater length can be considered. Entries must be submitted by midnight Tuesday. This means that they must be postmarked before that date, or left at the office of The Washington Post by that time if they are delivered in person or by messenger.

First and second prizes will be $100 and $50 in cash, respectively. Winner of third place has a treat in store, in the form of a year's subscription to the Crime Club, Inc. This will consist of 12 mystery novels from the wide variety of new titles released by this publishing house, which is noted for the high quality of its detective stories. One book will be delivered to the winner each month for a year, exactly as if a Crime Club subscription were ordered from a local book store.

There will be six prizes of $10 each, and five of $5 each, all cash, and in addition, 20 prizes of a copy of H. C. Bailey's first full-length novel about Mr. Reginald Fortune.

The Fleet Is In—Especially Affecting Summer Fashion

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The Fleet's in! In summer fashion, at any rate. Middies are strolling the streets, anchors aweigh on collars, red-white-and-blue flying gaily.

It's certainly smart to be nautical. Not only in sports dresses, but in general daytime and even quite dressy frocks.

The newest way to get that way is an old way. Get into a real old-fashioned sailor suit . . . the kind you wore if you were a school girl before the present generation . . . with braid on the collar, stars in the corners, and a sailor knot tie. (You can see it in the sketch.) And white dress, blue collar and red tie is the perfect combination.

There are other ways to be nautical, too, if you don't want to go to this extreme.

Nautical Jackets.

The jacket of a sports dress or a separate sports jacket may have a sailor collar. (And of course that good old standby, the separate double-breasted nautical sports jacket, is still in fashion). Or a simple one-piece dress for a jacket-and-dress combination may have such a collar to be worn outside the jacket.

Softer dresses . . . for example the smart prints . . . often have a sailor collar made of taffeta or organdie, minus the braid and the stars, but instead edged with pleated ruffling to make them more feminine looking.

Not really nautical, but nevertheless inspired by the square cut of the sailor collar, are those square front and back yokes which you find in some dresses. One we saw recently was of white organdie and Val lace on a black dress.

Red-White-and-Blue.

There are plenty of hurrahs for the red-white-and-blue this season, too. White sports dresses are combined with navy or marine blue jackets with a red belt, tie, lacing, buttons or scarf.

Many prints use the tri-color theme with white grounds and red-and-flag blue motifs. And this combination is found in prints for sports, daytime and evening. (Chanel of Paris is a sponsor of these colorings.)

And particularly for sportswear are tie silk prints and cottons in cravat patterns which introduce tiny nautical motifs such as pennants, pilot wheels, anchors and life preservers.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Cold Air Baths.

Dr. W. T. Johnson says that in 1768 he wrote the following: "You know that the cold bath has long been in vogue here as a tonic, but the shock of the cold water has always appeared to me, generally speaking, as too violent; and I have found it much more agreeable to my constitution to bathe in another element. I mean cold air. With this in view, I arise almost every morning and sit in my chamber without any clothes whatever for half an hour or an hour, according to the season, either reading or writing. This practice is not in the least painful, but, on the contrary, agreeable, and if I return to bed afterwards before I dress myself, as sometimes happens, I make a supplement to my night's rest of the most pleasant sleep that can be imagined. I find no ill consequences whatever resulting from it, and that at least it does not injure my health if it does not, in fact, contribute much to its preservation. I shall, therefore, call it for the future a bracing tonic bath."

Charming Garden Can Be Had With Little Cost, But Loving Care, Say Those Who Know

Early Riser Glimpses Flower's Best Color

Artist Using New Medium, Encaustic, Relates Success in Having Reproductions Retain Original Beauty and Life.

By Irene Hasbrook.

"WHY, yes, I have to get up very early and get out before the sun comes up. It's usually wet, with the dew still on everything. And it's buggy, too, waiting around for the flowers to open," said Miss Corrine Finsterwald, artist, coperfector with her artist husband, Guy Rowe, of a medium of art used by the Greeks when their country was young.

Miss Finsterwald's metier is flowers, with a contradictory emphasis on weeds and on blooms of the more exotic sort. There is frequently much personality in weeds, she says gravely, that she finds eminently paintable. As for unusual flowers, their scarcity and beauty intrigue her.

She will go through physical hardships to get what she wants in a flower model. After one of her dawn seiges with some obstinate bloom that refused to appear at its best except in the early morning, she returned to her home to discover a stream of blood running down one cheek. "A spider, I guess. There were plenty of them around," she observed ruefully.

Must Be Early Riser.

The pumpkin flower is one of the early-rising blooms Miss Finsterwald likes to snare onto her drawing pad. "You have to get them early or they'll melt like a dish of ice cream." One of her evening favorites is the nicotinia, variety of tobacco plant that lends itself as a model only at the hour of sundown.

But more about the medium she uses. It's called encaustic and is really a process of printing, remarkable in that different colors may be used for different prints, in that each print has all the earmarks of an original, and the colors will never fade.

"The Greeks used it and their art has come down to us in glowing colors never retained by the oil paintings that were done much later. The work I've done has shown no lessening in tone. I've watched it carefully. And there is always a dulling, even in the space of six months, of oils."

Hot Wax Process.

Encaustic, which she described as a hot wax process, is particularly fine for catching flower likenesses. "I've always been interested in flowers, aside from their potentialities in art. But I've become more so since we've perfected this medium. It's so perfect for catching the waxy texture peculiar to petals."

Water and heat don't effect encaustic in the slightest. "We nailed several prints to a board and left them out on the lawn in one of the worst thunderstorms of the season. We did the same thing through hot days. The prints came through intact.

This testing went on at the Connecticut home of the artist couple, a house that was the nucleus of a sheep ranch in pre-Revolutionary days. They had fun, she said, in discovering fireplaces, hidden behind improvised walls built during the nineteenth century period, when stoves flourished supreme.

Separate Studios Needed.

Miss Finsterwald volunteered the information that she and Mr. Rowe were forced to have separate studios, with his in a little town 14 miles away. "We never got anything done before this arrangement. The conversation was too stimulating. Several times we would sit down for breakfast, and when lunch time approached we'd be still there."

This couple had been functioning with apparent talent in the art world long before the encaustic medium entered their heads. They had much to do with the foundation of the independent movement in Detroit. They have both had many favorably received exhibits of their work in oils. And their particular hope is "American art for the Americans," which they feel the depression has helped to foster. That they have never studied abroad is a point of pride.

On display now at the Baltimore Museum of Art are examples of their work in encaustic. The first showing of prints developed in this medium was held some months ago at a private tea at the home of Mr. Mordecai Ezekiel, economic advisor to Secretary Wallace.

Miss Finsterwald is visiting Mrs. Elliott Moyer, 2121 New York avenue.

Chicago Fair Now Greeting Parnassians

N. Y. Women's Club Opens Booth for Benefit of Members.

PARNASSUS Club, a large residence club for young women, with headquarters in New York City, is one of the new exhibitors in the Hall of Social Science at the Century of Progress in Chicago. This furnishes a meeting place for any and all of its members who may visit Chicago this summer.

Miss Florence L. McMillan founded the club in 1919. The club provides inexpensive living quarters for students of the arts and for young business women starting their careers. Since its opening 15 years ago, approximately 5,000 members have lived within its walls.

A Parnassian acts as hostess at the booth and furnishes information concerning the club. The booth is attractively fitted with hand-made, wrought iron furniture, and is being used by members during their visit to the fair as headquarters for meeting other members and renewing old friendships formed during student days.

D. A. R. Pilgrimage.

Captain Molly Pitcher Chapter, of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will make a pilgrimage today to the grave of Molly Pitcher, at Carlisle, Pa.

While there the Carlisle Chapter will entertain the visiting chapter at tea at the home of Mrs. Gertrude Springer.

Miss Blanche Polkinhorn is in charge of the arrangements for the trip.

Davis, recording secretary; Mrs. Pauline Everhart, corresponding secretary; Miss Emily Clark, treasurer; Mrs. Ada Jean Bennett and Miss Mary Anderson, directors.

Lucy Holcombe Chapter, D. A. R., will hold a benefit card party June 12 at the home of Miss Cornelia Cotton, Davidson Drive, Bethesda, Md. Cards will be played at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and at 8 o'clock in the evening. Mrs. Joseph F. Lyvers is in charge of arrangements.

Lincoln Woman's Relief Corps, No. 6, will meet tonight at Woodmen's Hall, with Mrs. Carrie E. Calvin presiding.

A business meeting will be held by the Petworth Woman's Club tonight at the Petworth School, for the reading of annual reports and for the memorial service to the deceased members.

Modern Colored Furniture Changes Room Color Scheme

NOW that color has become an important factor in modern furniture—for many of the best designs, especially those for bedrooms, are of furniture with painted finish—it is more than ever important that the entire room color scheme be carefully planned. The furniture, which you will no doubt want in modern design, will serve as the base, and the room details should be chosen accordingly.

The relation of colors in the spectrum is the basis of all color harmony, and the few simple rules based on this relationship will help to guide you in your decorating plans. The colors in the order seen in the spectrum are red, orange, yellow, green, blue and violet. The primary colors are red, yellow and blue. The secondary colors are orange (red plus yellow); green (red plus blue), and violet or purple (blue plus red). Each color has what is known as its complement in the color scale; yellow is the complement to violet; blue to orange, and red to green.

Wide Variety Available.

Now on this basis any one of the three sanctioned types of color schemes can be planned. The monochromatic uses only one color but in any number of tints and shades. The analogous uses colors next to one another in the spectrum, yellow with orange, for example, or blue with violet, and the complementary uses complementary colors together—yellow with violet, or blue with orange.

More than one type of color scheme is often used within a room, in different ways. This and the fact that choice of tints and shades is highly important, necessarily leaves much of the success of the selection to individual good taste. But the above rules will be valuable in serving as a general guide to the amateur decorator.

An Example.

Suppose you have selected a modern American bedroom suite in soft blue and harewood. A gray rug and gray walls with a blue figure will harmonize. Red tassels on gray curtains will give the room unusual distinction.

Vivid hues and complementary colors require more thought and discriminating taste than analogous or monochromatic schemes in pastels. In using brilliant shades, be particularly careful not to have an excess of color or too great intensity, especially in reds or violets.

Size of Family Rules Talents Of Children

Study By Boston Doctor Reveals Interesting Information.

NEW YORK, June 3 (Spl.).—Children from small families are most likely to have literary talent, while those from large families are generally good mathematicians. Expert linguists usually come from large or from small families, but rarely from families of medium size.

These findings have been gleaned from a study of 20,000 children in Massachusetts public schools. A report on the study has been made by Dr. Neil A. Dayton, of Boston, of the Massachusetts Department of Mental Diseases.

Dr. Dayton suggested the aptitude for mathematics might be due to greater economic pressure and that literary tastes might be fostered by longer periods of quiet and loneliness in the small family.

Some interesting conclusions concerning personality development were drawn from the study. Some of these were:

Children of larger families rate high in sociability but are prone to lying, stubbornness, suggestability and quarrelsomeness.

Children in small families show more tendency to stealing, emotional instability, sex offenses, seclusiveness and egotism, and are often selfish and overaffectionate.

The quotient of intelligence is uniformly higher in smaller families.

Physical defects occur less frequently in children of small families. Home environment generally is better and conduct more normal.

The larger family does not produce any more defective children in proportion to its size than does the small family.

Dr. Dayton's studies were made chiefly of mentally retarded children, but psychiatrists believe the general conclusions would apply to children of all types.

Aviatrix Takes Flier As Dress Designer

IT'S another take-off for Miss Viola Gentry, ace aviatrix!

This time she's staying close to earth with a brand new assemblage of misses' frocks, designed in part by her.

"I'm flying low," said Miss Gentry in reference to the price range of her new undertaking. "I've had so much hard experience myself trying to buy a nice dress on a small budget that I decided I'd make it easier for others."

An All-Around Dress.

"I suppose one shouldn't brag about one's own clothes," she laughed, "but I can't help being a little bit thrilled (she stretched her arms out wide) about mine. You see this will sell for $7.95, and it's really a grand all-round dress. I wore it in the plane from New York down here, and I wore it around town after I got here, and and I'm stilly lazying around in it.

"It's very appropriate for Washington weather, too," she added, removing the jacket to display the cool sleeveless ness of the frock.

Miss Gentry's "skyline" dresses, hats and coats are going to be shown for the first time at the Palais Royal today.

"It's their debut," she declared, "and mine, too, in a sense, as it will be the first time I've met the public in the capacity of dress exponent.

Has Two Reasons.

"Perhaps I never would have," she explained, "if it hadn't been for the two sides of the money angle. I really was eager to back something that budgeteers like me could buy, and I want very badly to make enough money for bigger and better flying.

"I want that endurance flight record again—and I'll get it. I'm banking on my dresses to help me!" Miss Gentry spoke with the same indomitable spirit that has enabled her to keep her head up and chin out during thick and thin. And there's been a lot of "thin." After she established the first woman's endurance flight record in 1927 things looked pretty good.

But came 1929 and the crash which killed Jack Ashcraft, her copilot for another flight record, and critically injured Miss Gentry. Then 1932, when her fiance, Bill Ulbrich was lost in a transatlantic flight. And 1933, when after 21 hours in the air, her third attempt to establish a new record was balked by illness.

Still Enthusiastic.

"And I'm still paying the bills for that," she said with a wisp of a smile.

But nothing seems to dampen Miss Gentry's enthusiasm for flying. "There's only one competitor in my feelings," she decalared, "and that's my new business.

"Why you ought to see the coat, skirt, hat and bag which sells for $9.95! They're made of plaid waffle-weave material. And then there's a double-breasted fitted coat trimmed with blue buttons and soutash braid for $10.

"The hats, though, broke my heart," she declared. "They have to sell for $5, and I did so want them to be $3.

The aviation idea is carried out in Miss Gentry's clothes for the main part through the color schemes. There's cloud white, sunrise pink, mist gray, sunset yellow, and others along the same idea.

Here's hoping for an altitude record in fashions," she said.

THIS sleek-haired artist has had a thrilling experience, that of helping her husband to perfect a medium used when Greece was young and of being one of the first moderns to work in it. Child Tragic Victim When Wage Is Low

N. J. State Labor Official Pleads for Greater Social Service.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 3 (Spl.).—Children are the most tragic victims of low family incomes, Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, said in a commencement address here last night before the New Jersey College for Women. Her subject was "The Economic Basis of Child Welfare."

Referring to a sample study made by the Child Welfare Bureau, Miss Abbott said it had been found that one-half of the workers covered by the study were living on 30 per cent less than before 1929.

"What did this mean to the children?" she asked. "The schedules showed many children were not sent to high school because there was no money for clothes and books; that many of those who would have gone to college gave up that hope; that recreation was reduced to a minimum; that pleasant friendships were broken by removal to cheaper apartments and less desirable neighborhoods.

Savings Exhausted.

The fathers of these children had been employed and most of them began the depression with savings which, although now generally exhausted, had been a great protection to the children.

"Nevertheless, in these famalies the purchase of milk fell more than the incomes. Thus although 24 per cent of the group from which information was obtainable had suffered a reduction of 50 per cent or more income, 91 per cent had reduced the purchase of milk by 50 per cent or more. Indeed, 27 per cent had reduced the milk by 100 per cent. An increase in the income of workers is therefore a child welfare measure."

Miss Abbott said the income of the lowest wage-earning groups in the United States had never been enough to make possible the renting of comfortable homes in a favorable environment.

Good Home Outlook Poor.

"Although there have been wage increases in the last year and we hope for more in the future, there is no reasonable expectation of reaching such a wage level in the near future as will make decent homes possible for children whose fathers are in the lower income groups. Moreover, just as free public education adds to real wages, so public housing supplied, not free, but at cost plus amortization charges would raise the real wages of the lowest paid workers."

Miss Abbott said a satisfactory test of the recovery program lies in what it will do for children.

"The welfare of children requires the development of social service," she said. "Schools, health services, playgrounds and child protection, as well as provision for the dependent and the delinquent are needed. Such services are costly, but they create social values far beyond the money outlay."

Eastments Have Beauty, Where Once Was Rubbish

Expense of Boxwoods Sharply Reduced Through Cultivation From Slips; Iris Have Been Great Success.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

EVERY hyacinth the garden wears dropped in her lap from some once lovely head, sang the Persian poet, Omar Khayam, a thousand years ago. And that started all the trouble.

Since that time hundreds of flower lovers have waited expectantly for hyacinths to begin dropping in their gardens, or have planted roses and left them, believing with child-like faith that they would "just grow." When the flowers maliciously failed to appear the disgruntled gardeners usually gave up, and declared gardens were luxuries only the rich could afford.

But when Mr. and Mrs. George Eastment five years ago bought a lovely country house incongruously surrounded by tin cans and ashes, they pursued no such optimistic course. They firmly believed that with hard work and little money they could create beauty out of the ugliness surrounding them. They did.

Long Flower Season.

Now the sparkling pool in the Eastment garden reflects the faces of members of the flower family from early April until late November. And if the countenances mirrored in the water are jut a little vain, who can blame them? Their pride is pardonable.

Shy crocuses peeped into that pool in the snowy days of early spring, and were soon joined by sunny daffodils. In August dignified hollyhocks have promised to appear, and when they have marched to their death in orderly array crisp tangy chrysanthemums will make autumn gay.

Now that it is June, tall iris stand by the pool, cool and aloof in their purple gowns, and cuddly, sweet pinks nestle happily at their feet. Red and white, pale pink and yellow, the roses blow in unofficial fashion down the garden walks. Sometimes fat little balls of boxwood get in their way, but the roses ramble on. Once they almost ran into a bright bed of pansies. In one corner they rival huge peonies in splendor. They mingle with them at the feet of Lombardy poplars, whose tall slender bodies sway gracefully in the breeze.

Beauty Not Accidental.

This beauty is not accidental. The revolutionary process began five years ago when Mr. Eastment hauled seven truckloads of rubbish, graded and seeded the lawn and planned his garden on paper.

The trees were planted first, and the poplars were not chosen for their beauty alone. They grow rapidly and form a beautiful background. Mr. Eastment warns that the roots of the trees will destroy flowers if planted too near them.

The pool cost little, just enough to buy the necessary cement. Mr. Eastment designed it himself and built it. The water was piped from the house at small cost.

The flowers have been added each season at small expense. Mr. Eastment has found variety can be obtained by trading seeds and slips with other flower lovers. Books on gardening and plants are helpful, he says.

Cost Kept Low.

"Working in our garder, we discover many ways of growing plants at small cost," Mrs. Eastment explained yesterday. "For instance, our boxwood. This shrubbery is expensive. We have found that we can root our own. We take the slips and plant them in sand, keep them in a cool, dark place until the first sign of green apppears, we then transplant them. Look, here is one we planted a year ago." She pointed proudly to a sturdy little clump of boxwood.

Iris are the flowers Mr. Eastment likes best and gows most successfully. During the last few years when many gardners have been losing their Iris because of rot, Mr. Eastment's have flourished. The answer is that he dips the roots in a weak solution of formaldehyde before he plants them. He also warns Iris growers not to plant their roots too thickly and to thin them out continually.

"Anybody who loves flowers can make a beautiful garden," Mrs. Eastment insists. "I really believe you have to love flowers to make them grow. It takes time and labor, too; my husband gardens instead of playing golf."

One of the nicest things about such a garden is that you can beautify your house with the flowers from it, Mrs. Eastment says, and adds instructively.

"Besides, the more you cut them, the more they grow."

Fairy Tale's Effect Hinges On How Told

Can Be Good Influence or Bad, Psychiatrist Believes.

New York, June 3 (Spl.).—A fairy tale may be a good or a bad influence in a child's life—depending on how it is told. So believes Dr. Sandor Lorand, prominent psychiatrist, of this city.

Dr. Lorand does not hold with the modern school of thought that condemns all fairy tales. While he admits that sometimes these tales produce neurotic fears and fantasies, yet he also believes that a fairy tale may have constructive value to the child.

The effect of the tale, he points out, depends on how it is told, at what time and under what conditions. When the conflict of the tale is too easily identified with conflicts in the child's own life, much harm may result.

May Cause Breakdown.

Fairy tales improperly recounted have been known to cause nervous breakdowns after children grow up, according to Dr. Lorand. The case of the grown man who lives in an imaginary fairy world is not so unusual as might be supposed.

Since the ultimate effect of the fairy tale depends largely on how it is set forth, Dr. Lorand gave these suggestions for telling any type of story to children:

The story must obviously be suited to the child's age and condition.

Care should be taken that the tale is told in the proper physical and psychological setting.

The time of the day when the story telling takes place is of course, important (no ogre story before bed time).

Even such minor details as voice modulation must be given consideration.

Despite his knowledge of this and similar cases, however, Dr. Lorand said fairy tales, told as they should be, have a constructive value and fill a child's need.

Risko 7-5 Choice Over Brown as District Greets Big-Time Boxing

$2,000 Sale In Advance Reported

Veteran and Youngsters Hold Light Workouts; Both Men Fit.

Dudas, Pavlick Carded in Semifinal Which May Steal Show.

By Bill McCormick.

THE eyes of all Fistiana will be focused tonight on Griffith Stadium where the future of big-time boxing in Washington will be placed in the gloved hands of Natie Brown and Johnny Risko for ten rounds. With the financial success of the District's first outdoor punching program virtually assured by an unprecedented advance sale of almost $2,000, the matter of making or breaking first-water fisticuffing here depends entirely upon the performance turned in by Brown and the rubbery-blubbery old youngster who has wrecked mre ring careers than all the wine,women and song in a modern novel.

Despite a cut left eye received in training Saturday, which has been minimized by both fighters and their entourages, Risko ruled a 7-to-5 favorite in the betting yesterday and probably will enter the ring at even longer odds. Even within the last 14 months the old demon demolisher has defeated King Levinsky and Tommy Loughran, both of whom are ranked within hailing distance of the overstuffed class championship. That he has met with setbacks at the hands of Dick Daniels, Patsy Perroni, Jack Van Noy and Bob Godwin within the same period apparently will affect the betting odds little, if any. Risko's entire career has been one of losses to so-so opposition and startling wins over the best.

Rated High Up.

It is now generally conceded that Brown, in his present form, is one of the best. Most close followers of affairs fistic rate him no worse than fifth or sixth among the heavies and many are inclined to regard him as the best big man in the ring with the exception of Carnera and Baer. His redeeming efforts against Walter Neusel, Hans Birkie, Al Stillman, Marty Gallagher and Bob Tow have completely removed fro mthe minds of faithful memories of painfully putrid performances turned in while he was in very woebegone physical condition about two years ago.

Ostensibly because he had already reached the proverbial "pink," but probably because he did not wish to risk having the opening over his eye made deeper, Risko rested in his Yardman Park Hotel suite thoroughout most of yesterday. Later in the afternoon he drove to Green Oaks Tavern for light limbering-up exercises, but did not spar.

Brown Plays Golf.

Brown spent most of the morning relentlessly pursuing golf balls over hill and dale at Rock Creek, then indulged in a highly secret and confidential workout at the Jewish Community Center with Steve Dudas. It is believed the workout was predicated on facts about Risko's style learned at the short session of sparring Saturday, which was interrupted by the eye injury.

Olympic Probe Is Ordered by Americans

Brundage to Visit Germany and Accept if Pledges Are Found Kept.

NEW YORK, June 3 (AP).—The American Olympic committee today again deferred action on acceptance of the German invitation to the 1936 international games in Berlin, but empowered President Avery Brundage to accept if he should find, on a proposed visit to Germany, that Nazi pledges of nondiscrimination against Jewish athletes were being observed.

These pledges were made by the German Olympic committee at the meeting of the international Olympic committee in Geneva a year ago and reaffirmed at the recently completed sessions in Athens.

The action clears the way for a definite decision on American participation, for which the committee met to lay plans.

A resolution adopted at the November organization meeting in Washington promised such participation if alleged discrimination against Jewish athletes in Germany should cease, but provided no method for determining whether the Nazi pledges were being fulfilled.

President Brundage will visit Germany in August en route to a meeting of the international Amateur Athletic Federation in Stockholm.

Phillies Defeat Giants, 6-2, In Final

Jeffries Hits Two Homers as Seven-Game Losing Streak Is Ended.

NEW YORK, June 3 (AP).—After two successive failures, Irvine Jeffries finally led the Phillies to victory over the Giants today, winning the series finale, 6-2, and breaking Philadelphia's seven-game losing streak.

Jeffries hit two more home runs to make it four for the series and fourth of the season. His first came in the opening inning and drove Watson CSlark from the hill after Ethan Allen and Johnny Moore also had hit for the circuit.

Curt Davis held the Giants to four hits and and one run—a homer by Travis Jackson—in the first eight innings, but weakened in the ninth and was relieved by Snipe Hansen.

After the final out, an angry fan attacked Umpire Cy Pfiman and the arbiter battled him briskly for several minutes. The cause of the attack or the identity of the attacker remained unkonwn as police failed to intervene and some of the less irritable spectators separated them.

Borotra also became coholder of the mixed doubles crown as he and Collette Rosambert defeated Miss Ryan and Adrian Quist, of Australia in the final round, 6—2, 6—4.

Cubs Triumph; Advance to 2d Place

Pat Malone Is Liberal, But Holds Reds in Pinches to Score, 7 to 1.

CINCINNATI, June 3 (AP).—Granting hits liberally, Pat Malone, nevertheless, held the Cincinnati Reds in check today, while his teammates, led by Woody English, hammered out a 7-to-1 victory for the Chicago Cubs.

The triumph moved the Cubs into second place behind the league-leading Cardinals and set the stage for a great first-place battle between Chicago and St. Louis in their series which starts Tuesday.

A double by English, bunched with three singles and a walk after two were out in the third, helped score three runs. His triple in the fourth, along with a double and a single, added two more. Gabby Hartnett's eleventh home run of the season brought another in the sixth. Three singles in that inning completed the Chicago scoring.

U.S. Net Hope Boosted by Victory

Team Has 50-50 Chance to Beat Europeans, Williams Feels.

Australia and France Are Rated Strongest; Men Off Sunday.

BALTIMORE, June 3 (AP).—R. Norris Williams, 2d, non-playing captain of the American Davis Cuptennis team, believes the team has a 50-50 chance to defeat the winner of the European zone play.

"Our men are showing much improvement," he said after watching the concluding matches against Mexico here. "They are playing much better tennis than they did against Canada in Wilmington a week ago."

"Yes, I would say they have a very good chance."

Off Next Sunday.

The team that will leave for Europe next Sunday consists of Frank X. Shields, of New York, ranking player of the United States; Lester Stoefen, of Los Angeles; Sidney D. Wood, of New York, and George Lott, of Chicago.

The two singles assignments will go to Shields, Stoefen or Wood, with Shields and Wood favored, but who will paid with Lott fo the doubles match since the withdrawel of John Van Ryn, remains to be seen.

Is Being Considered.

The liklihood is tht Stoefen, who teamed with Lott last year to win the national doubles title, will be selected. Williams made it plain that he had not decidede yet, but he indicated that the Lott-Stoefen combination was being considered. He said they would play together at Wimbledon.

Van Ryn withdrew from the team because of business reasons.

Williams thinks Australia is the team the United States will have to beat to meet England, which now holds the cup.

"They look best," he said, "but France and Japan are strong and may win."

He placed them, in order of their strength, as Australia, France and Japan.

May Upset Dope.

Questioned about Japan's chances, he said they had developed some splendid players who were likely to upset the advance dope.

Williams did not comment on the play of the individual players against Mexico when the United States swept the five-match series without the loss of a set.

He seemed, however, to be well satisfied with the improvement the tam showd as a whole.

Too Much Whisky Crawford's Grief

Paris, June 3 (AP).—Too much whisky in a glass of water led to the dethroning of Jacg Crawford as the French Hard Court Singles Tennis champion in the opinion of tournament officials.

During the rest interval after the third set of his match with Baron Von Cramm, of Germany yesterday, the Australian asked for whisky and water, a restorative commonly used. His teammates, however, poured so muc hliquor into the glass that Crawford's legs were "cut in two" and the champion stumbled and faltered his way through the last two sets, both of which Von Cramm won.

Four Homers Help Tigers Win, 11-2

Detroit Pounds Earnshaw, Gains Second Place; Bridges Victor.

CHICAGO, June 3 (AP).—A quartet of Detroit home runs fashioned by Goose Goslin, Manager Mickey Cochrane, Hank Greenberg and Charley Gehringer, made Tom Bridges' work easy today and the Tigers trounced the Chicago White Sox, 11 to 2. The victory, coupled with a loss by Cleveland, put the Tigers in second place.

The victory gave Detroit a sweep of the series. Zeke Bonura accounted for both White Sox runs in the first inning, slugging out his thirteenth home run of the season with Mule Haas on base. The Tigers nicked George Earnshaw for five runs and eight hits in eight innings, and closed with a seven-hit six-run blast at the expense of Joe Hevin.

Lefty Gomez Wins Eighth Of Season

Foxx Pounds Out Two, Ruth, Gehrig, McNair Slam One Each.

Victory Gives New York Edge in Philadelphia Series, 2 to 1.

PHILADELPHIA, June 3 (AP).—Lefty Gomez pitched the New York Yankees to a 5-to-3 victory over the Athletics today. The decision gave the Yanks the three-game series by a count of 2 to 1 and was Gomez' eighth win of the year against one defeat.

The Yankees, by winning today while Cleveland was losing to St. Louis, 12 to 8, moved back into first place in the American League.

The contest was a battle of home runs. Jimmy Foxx ran up his total for the season to 13 by hitting two for the Athletics, and McNair hit one. Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth had circuit clouts for the Yanks, Gehrig's being his thirteenth of the season and Ruth's his ninth.

Frisch in 2,000th Game; Cards Bow

Pirates Victorious, 4 to 2, to Take Series.

Pittsburgh, June 3 (AP).—Frankie Frisch, the hard-working manager of the Cardinals, played his 2,000th National League baseball game today, but the Pirates spoiled the day for him by beating his team, 4 to 2, making it three out of four for the series.

Frisch broke into the majors in the middle of the 1919 season, playing with the Giants. He quickly won himself a regular job with John McGraw, as the "Fordham Flash" has been one of the game's outstanding players.

Heine Meine had the Cards blanked until two were out in the seventh, when Pepper Martin lined the ball over the left wall for a two-run homer that put the Cards within one run of the home team. The heat was too much for Meine, and after he retired the Cards, he

Mitchell Wins Fourth City Net Title in Row, Defeating McElvenny in Final

Star Checks Foe's Rally Near End

Scores 6-1, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5 in Hard-Fought Battle at Rock Creek.

Clara Tabler Conquers Dorette Miller for Women's Crown.

DOOLEY MITCHELL annexed his fourth successive City of Washington singles title when he defeated Ralph McElvenny, 6—1, 6—2, 4—6, 7—5, in the final match played yesterday afternoon on the Rock Creek courts. Bringing his big guns into play from the first serve, Mitchell swept through the first two sets, and then saw his opponent steady down and rally to take the third set. After the ten-minute intermission both came back and fought point for point and games went with service until the eleventh when Mitchell broke McElvenny's delivery and held his own to decide the issue.

In putting the fourth notch on the stock of his city title gun, the former Georgetown netman did not greatly surprise, but it was unexpected the may he paced his play. Mitchell is usually a slow beginner but a great finisher. Yesterday he started off at top speed but apparently was not in condition to maintain his burning pace throughout the match. The hot sun and his streuous efforts began to tell on him during the third set and it was a relief when the intermission came.

Good and Bad Tennis.

The fourth set found both players exhibiting both good and bad tennis, but each determined to hold his own service and strive for a break in his opponent's delivery. McElvenny started off by winning his own service only to have Mitchell even up by holdig his. This continued for ten games, with the break finally going to Mitchell in the eleventh game.

McElvenny, the former Stanford collegian, was not up to the form he exhibited to local tennis followers last summer. He appeared to lack the practice necessary to bring his game anywhere near its best. The first two sets found him erring frequently on easy shots that he usually is able to return without trouble.

Impressive Near End.

No particular department of his game let him down more than another; it was first a forehand, then a backhand, and then a volley that would find the net. After dropping of the first two sets, he pulled himself together beginning the third and made a real match of it to the end. Many in the gallery would have backed him to win if the match had gone into the fifth set.

Earlier in the afternoon Clara Tabler won her City title when she triumphed over Dorette Miller in the final of the women's singles, 6—0, 6—3. Miss Tabler displayed a powerful game that was too much for her opponent. Mrs. Miller forced many games to go to duece, but could not break up her opponent's strong attack to take more than three games.

Martinsburg Rallies To Defeat Hagerstown

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 3 (Spl.).—A seventh inning rally wherein Martinsburg scored six runs and drove "Lefty" Shaffer from the mound, enabled the Blue Sox to defeat Hagerstown here this afternoon by a 9-3 score.

The Blue Sox went into the seventh inning leading by a 3-2 score. A pair of misplays were responsible for the first two men getting on base and Shaffer weakened, giving six hits before he retired in favor of Young who finished the game. Manager Orem pitched effectively for Martinsburg.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Charles Town, June 3.

With banner crowds on Decoration Day and yesterday and a good representation on other days, the first week of spring racing here in the mountains was successful. Both longshots and favorites have had their innings, competition has been close, the track is in excellent shape, as compared with its condition at the first session here last December, and there has been no mention of doping or other irregularities. Track officials, trainers, owners, jockeys and all concerned seemed to be working toward the success of the meeting. One thing, you can depend on Mike and me to let you know the first time things stray from the up and up. Three winners for the firm yesterday.

BILL.

First race—Clear Knight turned in a splendid effort last out and shapes up best in this field. Water Lad did not run his race here last week. He can do better when the price is better. Jobs Dido stuck it out fairly well. If not made too much use of in the early stages, this maiden will be dangerous again.

Second race—Canobie Lake is about ready to pop down with the winning end of a purse. I'm taking him despite the fact that Yowell is slated to ride. Maple Sue and Easter Dale to take care of the others.

Third race—Golden Castle goes for the Bennings cash here. Has been racing regularly and comes from an alert stable. Lodorus probably is the class but has not been racing to old form. Dunwin for the rest.

Fourth race—Lampoon may come right back with a winning performance. That win of his here was impressive. Pink Post does not stay away from the winner's circle long when racing in this kind of company and may make matters close. Grand Rox should gain the show award.

Fifth race—Rustic Cuba is Clocker Mike's special. He says this one can go the route and I'm stringing along. Arab gets in with only a steadying impost and is the one to beat. Bokie B. has a purse to his credit and should go well among these.

Sixth race—Black Dreams appears the most likely to step down in this race. Sharp as a tack now and is only lightly opposed. Baby Rox and Captor to fill the place and show positions.

Seventh race—McDonald H, King Bird and Miss Catalan looks like the order of finish in the final. Mike stamps Hosain as a longshot with an excellent chance of gettting home.

Nats Are Defeated By Boston Sox, 7-2

the Yankees usurped the position of Cleveland at the top by beating the Athletics while the Indians skidded all the way into third place below the on-rushing Detroit Tigers, who lifted themselves into second by beating the White Sox. Over the reclining form of the Cleveland Club, the St. Louis Browns climbed into the first division coincident with the Nats' tumble.

For five innings Ostermueller had a shutout game in his possession, and was holding the Nats to a meager two hits with his left-handed delivery that was just wild enough to keep the Nats plate-shy. By that time the visiting ball players from Boston had boarded Whitehill for three runs in the fourth inning despite the fact that they hit only one ball out of the infield.

Whitehill had just finished holding the Sox hitless for the first three innings when he ran into the uprising in the fourth that was aided and abetted by his own wildness and a grievous error by Buddy Myer, who manhandled a throw to second base and paved the way for the second and third runs of the session.

Cissell Starts Rally.

Bill Cissell started it all with the only clean blow of the inning, a single into left field, and Whitehill then began to dig his own pitfall with a walk to Bill Werber. He might have escaped entirely unscathed had his defense not faltered. Joe Cronin scooped up Morgan's grounder and tossed it to Myer at second base to launch what had all the earmarks of an easy double play. But Myer dropped the ball, all hands were safe and the bases were full.

The Sox then scored the first run of the fray without raising a bat when Whitehill walked Johnson to force Cissell over the plate. And when Reynolds bounced a single over the tip of his upstretched glove to drive in the second run, Whitehill's luck had not improved. The third run of the inning scored on Porter's out.

A double play cut down the Nats in the fourth after Kuhel had made the first hit off Ostermueller and the Sox bounded back with two more runs in the fifth, scored very simply when Morgan walked, Roy Johnson tripled down the first base line, and Reynolds flied deep to Manush.

Score in Sixth.

Faced with this 5-0 deficit, the Nats finally pierced Ostermueller's pitching armor in the sixth when a walk to Myer was converted into a run by Manush's single, but thereafter they were hopelessly in the ruck.

The Sox tacked on two more runs for Ostermueller in the eighth on singles by Reynolds, Porter and Ostermueller, himself, who had been slugging the ball hard all day.

Came the eighth and the Nats scored another run, only to encounter great frustration on their grandest opportunity of the game. Myer singled and Manush drove him home and in a jiffy the bases were full with only one out, but Ostermueller helped himself over this obstacle by forcing Dave Harris to pop to Lary and Pinch Hitter Schulte to ground to the same fellow.

After that, the only thing of importance was the Nats' eighth hit off Ostermueller, a single by Myer with two out in the ninth that didn't even serve to halt the fans at the exits.

Iowa Expects Light Balloting In Primaries

Election Expected to Test Power of Democratic Administration.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 3 (AP).—A comparatively light vote was in prospect for Iowa's primary election in which candidates for State, Congressional and legislative posts will be chosen tomorrow.

Lack of interest in all but the Republican gubernatorial contest, observers believed, would keep at low figures the vote in both parties, despite efforts of Republican and Democratic organizations to pull their adherents to the polls.

But the Republican vote ordinarily is several times that of the Democrats in normally Republican Iowa and the comparative count of the two parties will be watched for an indication of the vote-holding power of the State's first Democratic administration in more than 40 years.

In the Democratic gubernatorial primary Gov. Clyde L. Herring is opposed by Representative Charles J. Zylstra, of Hawarden, and George Finch, of Sioux City, but Herring is regarded as virtually assured of the nomination.

All of the present nine Congressmen are candidates for renomination and four, three Democrats and one Republican, have opposition in the primary.

The veteran Cassius C. Dowell, of Des Moines, is the only Republican Congressman facing a contest. Three of his Democratic colleagues, B. M. Jacobsen, of Clinton; C. A. Willford, of Waterloo, and Otho D. Wearin, of Hastings, are opposed in their party's primary.

Benton Street Home Popular

Post Dwelling Equipped as "Electric Kitchen Health Home."

The Washington Post model home at 3902 Benton street northwest continues a most popular residential presentation. It represents the type and price of dwelling for which Washington residents have long waited.

That B. H. Gruver, its builder, has produced a great home value is evidenced by the acclaim the public has given it.

Built by Mr. Gruver, constructor of hundreds of the city's most excellent homes, this display dwelling is completely furnished by Hutchison, Inc., with draperies by John F. Ligon. It is notable for its electrically equipped kitchen and is referred to as "an electric kitchen health home."

The house will be open for inspection daily until 9 p. m., until further notice.

This charming dwelling may be inspected by driving out Massachusetts avenue to Wisconsin avenue, then turning south to Calvert street, west on Calvert to Thirty-ninth street and south to the house, or by going out Q street to Thirty-seventh street, then north on Thirty-seventh street to Tunlaw road, north one block to Benton street and west to the home.

Soft-Shell Crabs Output Below Par

Crisfield, Md., June 3 (Spl.).—After having been delayed over three weeks by persistent cold weather, shipments of soft-shell crabs have begun from this bay town, long famed as the "center of the Nation's soft-shell crab industry."

Packed alive in ice and protected by sea moss, the crabs are starting their annual journey westward. Some go as far as the West Coast, where, properly packed, they still remain in demand as table delicacies.

Although conservation commission reports show that the industry in the Chesapeake Bay area has leaped from $29,000,000 to $68,000,000 in the last five years, watermen say the catch is unusually small this year. Reports from Queen Annes County say that the season is already four weeks late, with hundreds of fishermen still idle. Reports from the Narrows are that a few soft crabs are being caught, but that hard crabs are both small and scarce. The severe winter is blamed.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Strange as it seems, Mahatma Gandhi was something of a dandy when he studied law in London years ago. According to his own life story, which he dictated in part to fellow political prisoners while in jail in the early 1920's, he wore Bond street clothes and took lessons in dancing and violin.

He bought a silk hat, he relates, for 19 shillings, and later paid 10 pounds (about $50) for an evening dress suit tailored in Bond street, London. He further admits that he spent about 10 minutes a day before the mirror adjusting his necktie and parting his hair just so.

The dancing lessons were rather unsuccessful, for Gandhi could not learn to keep time with the music. After half a dozen lessons he gave up dancing, but turned to the violin in hopes of learning the rhythm of Western music. Then he gave them both up.

The Mahatma also, he relates, posed as a bachelor during his student days, although he had a wife and child in India. This brought about some embarrassment, because an English friend, not knowing that Gandhi was already married, interested herself in finding a suitable bride for him.

Nicholas Brown, American merchant and philanthropist, was graduated from Rhode Island College in 1786. He later inherited his father's fortune and, among other philanthropies, gave his alma mater $160,000. In recognition of this gift the school in 1804 changed its name to Brown University, a name which it has since borne.

NAVY OFFICER'S WIFE ARRESTED IN GOTHAM

Mrs. —— —— of This City Charged in Auto Homicide Case.

Mrs. ——, Connecticut avenue, wife of Lieut. ——, of the —— Division of the Navy Department, was arrested in New York City last night, according to the Associated Press, on a charge of homicide after the car in which she and her husband were riding crashed with another machine, killing ——, ——, New York theatrical press agent.

Lieut. ——, Navy Department records show, is on a five-month leave of absence. He and —— were in New York contemplating a trip to Europe.

The accident occurred at Forty-second street and Lexington avenue. ——, of New York, driver of the other car, also was arrested on a homicide charge. —— was a passenger in —— car.

Police attributed the accident to faulty brakes on both cars.

A SPECIFIC CASE of WORN BRAKES

This Naval Officer and his wife had planned a trip to Europe, but suddenly that dream was shattered! Read the article reproduced on the left and see how quickly disaster and death can overtake any driver who neglects the most essential feature of his car—his BRAKES! No trip to Europe for them now. Instead an agonizing wait for trial under a charge of auto homicide with a possible conviction and penitentiary sentence. And this is not uncommon for there were 31,215 "autocides" in 1933! This sort of carelessness simply does not pay!

Here is the cause of the accident. Both cars had faulty brakes—both drivers are responsible.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Pursuit.

The Punktown bank was robbed one day, by bandits who were wearing masks; and when the tidings came our way we all forsook our daily tasks. "This sort of thing has got to cease," we cried in loud and ringing tones, re-echoed by the town police, old Bildad Jinks and Gaffer Jones. "We'll track these bandits to their lair, and slay them as we'd slaughter quail, or drag them homeward by the hair to spend their misfit lives in jail." And then we broadcast wild alarms, to summon every man we knew, and then set forth to hunt up arms, with which to slay the lawless crew. We hunted up some rusty guns, old heirlooms in the shape of spears, bequeathed by fathers to their sons, and handed down from long gone years. One had a cleaver in his hand, he'd borrowed at the butcher's joint; he was prepared to make a stand and bid the highwayman aroint. Another had a baseball bat, and it was good to see him prance, and say he'd knock the robbers flat, if once he had a decent chance. One fellow had a cross-cut saw, and many pitchforks were in sight, and every man had clamped his jaw, and was quite ready for a fight. We climbed into our cars—alas! at hunting thieves we were not skilled, for all our cars were out of gas and we must wait till they were filled.

Radio Waves and Ripples

WJSV has at last found a program at which Arthur (The Great) Godfrey can be displayed, in person, with very little chance of serious damage to its own properties.

And inasmuch as the broadcast is to demonstrate the enduring qualities of a certain make of automobile, the anticipated jamming and rushing of fanatic Godfreyites will be a source of particular alarm to no one.

The program is to be made from an auto lot at Pennsylvania avenue and Fourth street northwest where there are many open spaces and plenty of room on adjoining buildings for the overflow. There on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights this week The Great Arthur will be on view, as he describes, for the benefit of any who may be home and caring to listen, the burning and bouncing of automobiles.

And autos are going to be bounced to show they can take it, and burned to show just exactly what a fellow will be up against trying to collect insurance that way. And The Great Arthur is going to give away pictures of himself, freshly autographed. Some fun . . . some stuff.

We are told that we are responsible for this, that we never should have spoken admiringly of The Great Arthur and his facility for describing a parade. That was some months ago, and we had hoped almost every one had forgotten, and, anyway, though we mean to be brave, and all that, we can't for the life of us see what a parade has to do with an auto burning and bounding party. We are inclined to feel a trifle hurt.

ANOTHER new air giant is about to raise a gawky head and roar in the general direction of Washington, Havana, Walla Walla and Bangor.

We refer to WOR to which the Federal Radio Commission has granted authority to set up a 50,000 watt transmitter at Carteret, N. J.

As a matter of fact, the WOR transmitter already has been put together in the laboratories of the Western Electric Co. All that remains is to construct a couple of buildings to house it.

We gather from what we have heard that aside from having some one around most of the time to push a few buttons, the new transmitter will be perfectly able to take care of itself. Push one button, for instance, and the thing goes on the air without further outside encouragement by means of a series of electrical relays which perform scads of starting operations in proper order.

Once on the air, the transmitter is built to stay there until another button is pushed. Some of its contraptions actually foresee possible interruptions and either forestall them or warns of impending disaster early enough for the engineers to do some forestalling on their own. It sounds incredible, but we were told that with a reverse current switch one of these devices can detect the approach of possible excess voltage and cut off the source before serious overload occurs, and that other gadgets do a pretty fair job of testing the equipment, advising the operator when to throw away old tubes, &c.

N. B. C. is staging a public broadcast tonight in Washington Auditorium.

The "Variety Program"—which it will broadcast for the division reunion in New York Friday . . . with the ex-dogs and boys watching and Gen. Harbord and Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone making speeches . . . a prize is to be given the raconteur of the oddest-radio-job story told at a meeting of the Washington Section of the Institute of Radio Service Men in the Riggs Bank Building, Fourteenth street and Park road, Tuesday night.

BABY LEROY, the infant progidy of the Paramount lots, will be the youngest star ever to make a guest radio appearance when he takes over the microphone in Columbia's "Forty-five Minutes in Hollywood" next Sunday.

Marguerite Cromwell, Edwin Steffe, Rudy Schramm's orchestra—goes out from the auditorium stage at 8 p. m. at the behest of its sponsors and for the benefit of customers at a concurrent automobile show there.

For terseness of expression nothing will better Ted Church's reply to C. B. S. Division Engineer Henry Grossman just before the fleet review in New York last week.

Goodman, certain something terrible was going to happen, wired:

"Did equipment weather flight to Guantanamo Bay? Did you arrive on Lexington O. K.? Are you set up O. K.? Are you getting signals O. K.? Is everything working out as per prearranged plan?

Church:

"Yes."

WRC Engineer Harold Yates has figured that if you tell people where you are going on your honeymoon they'll probably leave you alone.

Like the Delphian Oracle (Latin IV), however, he's named two possible destinations of the trip that is to follow his wedding June 30.

Both networks will have on the air accounts of the National Open golf championship at the Merion Cricket Club, Ardmore, Pa., this week-end . . . and Columbia, if it lives that long, would like to broadcast the closing session of Congress . . . you will be able to find Guy Lombardo several times a week on N. B. C. beginning Saturday, sans Burns and Allen . . . N. B. C. has worked the history of the Second Division into drama —"Devil Dogs and Doughboys"

Week's Trade Still Holds to Steady Levels

Slight Improvement Noted in Wholesale Buying; Freight Up

New York, June 3 (AP).—While business leaders expressed some concern over strike threats and curtailment of purchasing power in the drought areas last week, business statistics continued to register well maintained volumes, with further slight expansion appearing in some lines.

Memorial day holiday requirements boosted retail trade early in the week, and buying seasonal merchandise was helped all through the period by warm weather.

The slight improvement noted in wholesale buying last week was extended, according to Dun & Bradstreet, with buying for autumn needs gaining momentum.

One of the most conspicuous gains of the week was a jump of 3 percentage points in steel ingot production to 60 per cent of capacity, as estimated by Steel, but in view of the exceptional forces behind it, this showing failed to inspire confidence.

The gain was attributed chiefly to buying for inventory under the old price schedules, in expectation of higher prices after July 1, and to laying in supplies as protection against any interruption of deliveries by labor troubles. With so much steel going into inventories, the industry felt that a sharp recession was likely after July 1.

The weekly statistics of electric power production and the movement of railway freight, however, were more encouraging. Improvement over a year ago is narrowing, because of the sharp upswing in process at this time in 1933, but both carloadings and power output showed contra-seasonal gains over the preceding week. Moody's seasonally adjusted index for carloadings (based on 1928 as 100) rose 0.6 of a point to 61.5, and for power output, 0.2 of a point to 108.

Automobile production last week was substantially lower, reflecting the holiday, but retail sales continue to hold up well for this time of year.

While sales of cars as a whole are expected to show normal recessions this month, some manufacturers are trying to stimulate the market by introducing lower priced markets, and the industry looks for a fairly good month. Cram estimated production for the holiday week at 54,185 units, off 22,096 from the full week preceding.

The textile industry in the main is operating at reduced schedules, with the cotton mills facing a strike threat as result of the plan to cut output 25 per cent during coming weeks to work off excessive stocks. An exception to the slack tendency is the knitting mill division, where capacity operations are reported on bathing suits. The wool goods markets are said to be showing some inclination to revive again. Offerings of fall lines are being delayed somewhat by uncertainty over raw material prices.

Stocks Fail To Rally With Grain Flurry

Speculation Is at Low Ebb; 10-Year Record for Dullness Broken.

New York, June 3 (AP).—Stocks went counter to the bull market in grains this week.

Speculation in stocks was at the lowest ebb since March, 1933, measured by May business on the stock exchange. On Tuesday, before the Memorial Day recess, a ten-year record for dullness was established, sales dwindling to 279,252 shares.

Wall street interpreted the drought news in traditional vein, namely as more bearish than bullish, despite appreciation in grain values. It was assumed crop losses would overshadow whatever benefits accrue to farmers from higher prices.

With threatened steel and textile strikes blackening the outlook, slow liquidation was resumed in the share market. It picked up momentum yesterday with the result that stocks greeted the new month by making a new low for the year, measured by the average price of 90 stocks, which pierced the May 12 low by a fraction.

Steel shares bore the brunt of liquidation. U. S. Steel common and preferred and Bethlehem were conspicuous among issues going into new low ground for the year. Farm implement and mail order shares also were hit.

Business seems to have been holding better than the stock market, judging by latest statistics. Steel, freight car loadings and electric power consumption recorded moderate gains. Rail traffic approximated the year's top touched in March. A rebound in steel operations was attributed partly to stocking of supplies by buyers in anticipation of a steel strike. Gains in major barometers of industrial activity over last year have been narrowing, however, for business was expanding rapidly a year ago.

Abundance of Capital.

The bond market continued to reflect a great abundance of capital awaiting outlet as soon as the horizon clears.

Thus far, however, the renewed flow of funds from abroad has not gone into the stock market to appreciable extent. The sag in the share market appeared to reflect uneasiness in speculative and brokerage quarters over the manner in which the Federal control will work, and continued uncertainty over the course of corporate profits.

The turnover in shares for the week in the stock exchange was only 2,466,421, reflecting in part the Memorial Day holiday, compared with 3,179,390 shares in the previous week. Bond sales totaled $44,969,000 par value, against $54,973,000 in the previous week.

Summer Business Lull.

On the whole, Wall street analysts were not looking for a summer lull in business of much more than seasonal proportions, save possibly in the steel industry, where there has been considerable manufacturing for inventories.

The drive to wind up the session of Congress by June 9, and the blocking of several bills regarded as disturbing to business, led to the belief in several quarters that the Administration was now concentrating on the promotion of a natural business recovery, which would permit gradual withdrawal of artificial support by heavy governmental expenditure.

It was expected, however, that business would continue to be bolstered for some time by substantial Public Works outlays. The Treasury was expected after a few weeks to launch upon an active silver buying program which some economists thought might have at least psychologically inflationary influence.

Drought Puts the AAA Upon the "Spot," and in Effect Faces It With the Necessity of Making Good Upon a Guarantee.

By Ralph West Robey.

That the Government must come to the aid of the farmers in the drought-stricken area goes without saying. Some of the estimates that are being made as to the amount that such relief will cost, nevertheless, appear utterly unreasonable. Senator Shipstead, chairman of the drought conference, for example, says that at least $1,000,000,000 will be necessary. If we spend any such amount within the next few months it will be, not because such a sum is necessary in order ta prevent starvation, but because it is felt that politically it is imperative to pump incredible sums into the area in order to prevent criticism of the New Deal in general and the AAA in particular.

In other words it will be because the Government atempts to a major extent to offset the loss incurred by the farmers as a result of the drought. That the Administration has no resposibility bility to assume such a burden is to assume such a burden is too obvious to need emphasis. The responsibility of the Government is to prevent unnecessary suffering in the area. This means simply, that it must prevent starvation and give the people of the drough region the other bare necessities for existence.

Will Be Difficult to Limit Aid to Necessities.

In saying that this is the limit of the responsibility of the Government, however, one is dealing with theory. Unfortunately this Administration is faced with a problem that will make it exceedingly hard for it to limit its aid to any such amount. This is because it has assumed the task of positively restoring price levels and prosperity. Because of this it has engaged upon a program that has created artificialities from one end of the economic system to the other.

Through these artificialities a widespread, let us say, vested interest has been created in higher prices and "assured" business improvement. In the case of the farmers this vested interest takes the form of curtailed production. Such curtailment was agreed to by the farmers because of the guarantee by the Government that in this way the economic condition of the agricultural regions would be bettered. It was, if you like, and as the Department of Agriculture is so fond of pointing out, a voluntary program, but it was a voluntary program the success of which was underwritten by the Administration.

Success Without Drought an Open Question.

Whether the program would have been a success in the case of the farmers if the drought had not occurred is, I suppose, an open question. In any case, it no longer is of much more than academic interest. The important thing now is that the Government is faced with the necessity of making good on a guarantee.

This is true, regardless of the fact that the drought would have been of ruinous proportions quite regardless of any crop curtailment program. It makes little difference how many acres one has under cultivation, if it all is destroyed. The farmers, however, will be inclined to overlook such a point. And they will be encouraged to overlook it by critics of the New Deal. They will be told that it was the AAA that is responsible in large measure for their current ills.

The result is, and will be, that the AAA is on the "spot." There is only one way that its continued support can be obtained. This is by pouring scores upon scores of millions of dollars into the area. If enough is spent, criticis probably will be silenced. Some one, however, has to pay the bill, and rescue parties are becoming too frequent to be healthy for the credit of the Government.
